Jailed '4-F' Says Farmer Kept Wages To Pay Bill

FBI Investigation May Be Sought On 'Involuntary Servitude' Report

Army vs. Court

DISPUTE between Army and U. S. Court over suspension of habeas corpus writ in Hawaii may be taken to Congress. Page 3.

Question of Rights

By Lin Celdon
Post Staff Writer.

Investigation by the FBI of possible "involuntary servitude" in the Rockville, Md., area was believed impending last night after Stanley Day, 19-year-old 4-F Army reject, serving a sentence for failure to accept reemployment with a farmer at $2 per day under Maryland's so-called "work or fight" law, declared he refused the job because his employer kept his earnings and credited them against a bill owed the farmer by Day's father.

And when he continued to remain on the farm, which is owned by Harry Bussard, in the home occupied by his father, 62-year-old Daniel B. Day, a Bussard tenant farmer, young Day said he was ordered off the property. That was Wednesday, and a few hours later he was arrested while trying to catch a free ride "into Rockville to look for work," he said in his jail cell yesterday.

This disclosure caused the Department of Justice Civil Liberties Division to look up antipeonage laws and, if violations are evident, the FBI will be given the task of rounding up those guilty.

Day's Own Words

Young Day's own words, as he peered through a small door in his cell door, were:

"I worked for Harry Bussard most of this summer, since early spring. I was paid $2 per day but had to sleep out and eat all my meals out. Bussard did not supply any of my meals. I had to go home for lunch. I did not always get all my money as some was kept because my father, Daniel B. Day, owed Bussard some money. My father did not know I had been arrested until the next day and

Thundershower Fails to Break 2-Month Drought

A violent rain and thunderstorm last night at 8:30 failed to break the drought, as only 0.13 of an inch of rain fell during slightly more than an hour of storm and lightning.

It was the biggest rain, though, since 0.15 of an inch had fallen here August 16.

The drought now is in its 68th day and all the Weather Bureau held out to desparate farmers of nearby Virginia and Maryland was cooler weather without any mention of additional rainfall. Yesterday's highest temperature here was 85 degrees, the low was 72.

16 Nip Planes to His Credit

Japs Using Improved Zero, Getting Tougher, Says D.C. Ace

By the Associated Press

Guadalcanal (Delayed), Aug. 26.—A new American flying ace says the Japanese, using an improved Zero, are learning to ape the combat tactics of our fighting pilots, but that they still prefer to "hit us in the back."

Marine First Lieut. Kenneth A. Walsh, 27, 1228 Newton st. ne., Washington, D. C., who had climbed to the top among currently active fighter pilots in the South Pacific, said the Japanese fliers won't attack "unless they have everything in their favor."

"When they do strike, it's a hit-run proposition," he said. "If they see that you're in trouble, they go right back after you. They always try to hit us in the back."

Flying with a Corsair squadron and always outnumbered at least three to one, Walsh has shot down 16 Japanese planes and probably four more since April 1. The 30-plane squadron has netted 63 Zeros since February.

In 13 contacts, the Brooklyn-born Marine fighter brought down 11 Zeros, four dive bombers and one float biplane. His total exceeds that of Marine Capt. James E. Swett of San Mateo, Calif., previously the leading ace in this area.

Walsh said the Japanese have improved the Zero with "a couple hundred more horsepower," adding:

"They are learning to use our tactics and are improving a hell of a lot. Now they stay together and cover each other. But they are not aggressive."

However, he said, "if you have to bail out, they'll come in like

U.S. Bombers Win 13 Fights With U-Boats

Atlantic Patrol Force Sinks or Damages 10, Forces 3 to Lose 'Prey'

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 27.—U. S. Army bombers searching the Atlantic as far as 1000 miles from their home bases recently sank or damaged 10 German U-boats and forced three others to stay submerged so they could not attack nearby Allied shipping, the Army Air Forces Antisubmarine Command announced today.

The 13 submarines were involved in as many separate sea-air battles, said the command, and none of the battles was previously reported. B-24 Liberator bombers especially equipped for antisubmarine warfare were used in the fights, it reported, and all returned safely, although five were subjected to severe antiaircraft fire from the U-boats.

No dates nor locations were revealed.

Five of the submarines were listed as believed definitely sunk, and five as damaged if not sunk.

Perfect Straddle Hit

The antisubmarine command said a bomber piloted by First Lieut. Walter S. McDonnell of Duluth, Minn., dived through a hail of shell-fire that ripped through all section of the plane and seriously injured half the crew but that:

"The wounded bombardier dropped his depth charges in a perfect straddle of the sub which was seen by the waist gunners to break in two in the middle near the conning tower. The rear section of the boat rose 10 to 12 feet out of the water, turned over and then settled with no forward motion."

The crew of a plane piloted by James H. Darden of Guymon, Okla., sprayed the deck of one submarine with machine-gun bullets, straddled it with depth charges and caused the U-boat to explode internally, the command reported.

Second Lieut. Thomas K. Gerhart of Mansfield, Ohio, a bombardier, notice a submarine coming up to the surface, and First Lieut. Thomas E. Huenning of New Bremen, Ohio, piloted their plane toward it for another "kill."

"Blasted out of control," the command said, "this sub's bow rose 15 feet out of the water at a 45-degree angle and then slid down stern first to Davy Jones' locker."

The antisubmarine command said it believed at least 15 men escaped from a U-boat demolished by one bomber.

Four-F Taunt's Backfire Covers Trio With Shame

Quincy, Mass., Aug. 27 (INS).—Three Coast Guardsmen were in court today for precipitating a brawl by taunting Harry C. Crozier, as "Four-F Charlie."

Crozier showed plenty of fight, as well he might. He is a Canadian commando veteran who was honorably discharged because of wounds he received at Dieppe.

Judge David Rose dismissed charges against two and released the third on $100 bond for the September grand jury.

Planes Race To Europe By Hundreds

RAF Looses Great Sequel to All-Day Pounding at Nazi Airfields in France

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday) Aug. 28.—Hundreds of giant bombers that sounded like the greatest air armada of the war thundered out from British bases toward Axis-occupied Europe late last night in a swift RAF sequel to yesterday's daylight-to-dusk raids by United States Flying Fortresses and medium Allied bombers on Nazi airdromes in France.

The heavy British bombers streaked across the starlit straits in gigantic formations for two hours, possibly headed for Berlin.

London newspapers said they never had received reports of air activity so broad in scope and from such widespread areas. The reports came from points separated by scores of miles along the English coast.

Gets an Early Start

It was an early start for the RAF. In the past, this often has indicated the bombers were aiming for points deep in the continent—possibly Berlin or other big German war production centers.

The British planes jumped off soon after the Flying Fortresses returned late yesterday.

The Fortresses had teamed up with P-47 Thunderbolts and RAF and Allied Spitfires to strike new blows at Axis targets in France which were identified in a Canadian communique as German airdromes.

Swarms of the RAF night raiders were heard coming back early today, and Britons, who usually take calmly the roar of their planes going out toward the continent, dropped their quiet demeanor to exult. Hundreds of persons in southeast coast towns tumbled out of bed and rushed outdoors to try to catch a glimpse of the returning warplanes.

Crowds along the sea fronts sent up mighty cheers as the high flying planes roared back to their bases.

Warnings in Switzerland

Reuters reported from Zurich that air raid warnings had been sounded in western Switzerland during the night, indicating that RAF raiders might have gone over southwestern Germany or northern Italy.

Cleveland Closes Doors to Migrant Workers 60 Days

Cleveland, Aug. 27 (AP).—Cleveland will close its doors to immigrant workers for 60 days, starting Tuesday, August 31, the War Manpower Commission's local labor-management committee decided yesterday.

The WMC Committee viewed the ban as necessary to relieve congested housing conditions and lighten other burdens imposed by the heavy influx of men and women from other labor market areas.

How Air Power Works

Careful Planning, Rehearsing Preceded U. S. Raid on Foggia

By Joseph Morton
Associated Press Staff Writer

An Allied Air Base in North Africa, Aug. 26 (Delayed).—The spectacular low-level attack by more than 100 American P-38s on the Foggia groups of airdromes in eastern Italy Wednesday was disclosed today as a brilliantly executed play designed to smash German bomber forces which had been massed there in dangerous proportions.

With all reports, including reconnaissance photographs, now at hand, the men who planned and directed the raid termed it one of the major achievements of the northwest Africa strategic air forces. Never before had American pilots flown so fast or so low so long.

At least one twin-engined Junkers 88—the enemy's best all-around plane—was destroyed or damaged for every Lightning in the attacking force. Several score enemy fighters were also knocked out.

The operation, largest of this type ever attempted in this theater, was mapped with unusual care and thoroughness.

"I had my fingers crossed every minute of the raid," one high-ranking officer who helped plan it commented today. "It was something new—an experiment—and there were some who weren't convinced it would work. Needless to say they are sold now."

The story of the attack goes back to the Tunisian and Sicilian campaigns when Allied fragmentation bombs smashed hundreds of German and Italian aircraft parked in protective revetments on airdromes. The enemy apparently decided that the only way to prevent destruction was to disperse the planes over a wider area and tried out the plan at the new Foggia base. Here the main field, with 10 or 11 satellites, was spread over a large, flat valley. With no two planes closer than 100 yards apart, the German air force felt it could safely rebuild its strong bomber force in southern Italy without running the risk of crippling losses from American and British raids.

Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle, commander of the American strategic air force in North Africa, and his staff studied the problem and decided that a low-level strafing attack was the answer.

Although it meant additional time for preparation, each pilot in the large force required, was given one particular role and coached on it for several days. Finally, just before the time to strike, the entire armada was sent

Soviet Chief Said to Be Replying to Quebec Bid

Report Says Russ Premier Will Insist That 'Certain Issues' Be Threshed Out

London, Aug. 28.—Premier Josef Stalin has agreed to Soviet participation in a tripower conference with the United States and Great Britain.

V. M. Molotov, commissar of foreign affairs, is understood to have communicated this decision to Admiral William H. Standley, United States Ambassador to Russia, and Sir Archibald Kerr, British Ambassador to Russia, this week, evidently in reply to the proposal from Quebec.

News of Russia's readiness to attend such a conference reached me today from first-hand sources.

From other, but usually reliable quarters, it was heard that Stalin's acceptance of the conference suggestion was made conditional upon previous completion of a list of topics for discussion at the tripower meeting. Assuming the accuracy of this report, and there seems to be little reason to doubt it, this stipulation is significant.

Wants Issues Faced

It would apparently mean that Stalin wants assurance against a haphazardly improvised huddle. He presumably wishes further guarantee that certain "delicate" issues will be placed openly on the conference table and faced squarely.

What might such subjects be? Certainly, above all, a more satisfactory dovetailing of the western powers and Russia's strategy and that means a speedier second front in western Europe. Stalin might furthermore, want to approach future territorial arrangements, including Anglo-American recognition of the frontiers the USSR regards essential to security.

One can imagine at least a dozen problems awaiting settlement, some major and others minor, which Stalin may want put on the agreed agenda of the conference.

Vice Commissar Ivan Maisky will be in London next week for a short stay, probably only a few days.

The visit of the newly appointed vice commissar of foreign affairs is likely to coincide with the return to England of Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, and it seems obvious that Maisky will attempt, with them, to prepare for the important tripartite conference.

Nazis Given Lie

Russia's decision to take part in a meeting again exposes the Nazi lie and nails to the mast a statement of the German official news agency's diplomatic correspondent, Siegfried Horn, that Stalin considers any exchange of views with Anglo-Saxon powers superfluous.

Maisky is undertaking his preconference spadework at a period when the Anglo-American-Soviet garden is more cluttered with ugly weeds than at any time since the name United Nations was created.

The British press, which has been discussing differences between Russia and the Western democracies, is now devoting even more space to the topic and treating it with extreme candor.

Counsel Favor $300 Grocer Sanitary Fine

Corporation Lawyers To Recommend Early Revision of Law

By Joseph Paull
Post Staff Writer

Edward W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel, disclosed yesterday he will submit today a report to the city government recommending revision of a health ordinance which allows a grocer guilty of a sanitary code violation to escape with $25 fine while a restaurant operator guilty of an identical offense faces a $300 maximum fine.

That the ordinance will be acted on immediately was indicated yesterday when Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech announced he would approve the Thomas report.

Stumpling Block

The ordinance has been described as a stumbling block toward effective prosecution of the campaign to "clean up or close up" the city's insanitary food establishments.

Other developments were:

1. Alessandro Gagliardint, restaurant operator at 918 17th st. nw., was sentenced to pay a $150 fine or serve 45 days in jail on a charge of "offering for sale steak which was unwholesome and unfit for consumption by a human being or an animal. He was fined under the Unwholesome Food Act seldom invoked.
2. Two other food handlers were fined in Municipal Court.
3. Charles E. Sanford, owner of a restaurant at 62-64 H st. ne., was haled before the Board of Revocation of License for open hearing.
4. Judge George D. Neilson urged those guilty of flagrantly violating the sanitary code be given the maximum penalty.

Thomas said that under a local ordinance, grocers accused of

Lightning Bolt Starts $50,000 Plant Blaze

Five Firms Share Loss As Flames Wreck Old Lumber Shops

The old W. A. Pierce Lumber Co., 610 Rhode Island ave. ne., was virtually destroyed by a three-alarm spectacular blaze as a result of a bolt of lightning in last night's thunderstorm. Damage to five tenant companies was estimated at $50,000.

The property is owned by S. Percy Thompson, real estate dealer, of 3247 R st. nw., and was occupied by McNulty Bros. Co., United Clay Products Co., the Auto Truck Co., the Bitendender Carpenter Co., and Schnider Insulation Co.

Thompson said his damage would be about $25,000, according to information he had during the fire. The damage to the tenants could not immediately be learned but it was understood valued merchandise was stored there.

Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter led the District's firemen in fighting the blaze and Raymond C. Roberts, acting fire marshal, was on the scene. Auxiliary firemen turned out to help the regular force.

District Motorcycle Patrolman J. S. Teague, 30, of the traffic division, narrowly escaped injury when his motorcycle collided with an automobile as he rushed to the the fire. The car was driven by R. L. Walker, Negro, 36, 1602 4th st. nw. Walker was not held.

The fire confined itself to three one-story buildings. One of them, of sheet iron construction, was badly damaged and the other two were ruined.

The flames at times shot into the air for 50 feet. Persons in the outskirts jammed telephone wires seeking information.

Headhunters Saved Lives of 20 Who Bailed Out in Burma Wilds

The India-Burma Jungle, Aug. 23 (Delayed).—Burmese jungle headhunters, every one a primitive killer, saved our lives when 20 of us leaped by parachute from a crippled United States transport plane into the mountains of northern Burma three weeks ago today.

I am grinding this out on a hand-crank wireless set dropped to us by one of the rescue planes of the air transport command. We are in a village of aborigines perched atop one of the 6000-foot mountains.

Ahead of us lie more mountain peaks and tortuous valley trails, but our party is in good shape, physically and morally.

Our party—21 passengers and members of the crew of a four-engine transport plane—was en route from India to China on August 2 when engine trouble developed. Below were ragged peaks and steaming jungle growth.

Those aboard the plane, besides myself, included: John Davies, jr., Second Secretary of the American Embassy in Chungking; William L. Stanton of the United States Office

Red Tide Rolls

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday) Aug. 28.—Russian armies, already storming through two great holes in the German lines and steadily hammering at a third, opened a fourth battle center yesterday by breaking through south of Bryansk and overturning Sevsk and 20 other localities, Moscow announced today.

The new staggering blow 75 miles south of Bryansk carried the driving Russians within 20 miles of the railway line linking embattled Bryansk with Kiev, key to the whole German defenses along the Knieper River.

Sevsk fell to two Russian columns pounding in on the German stronghold from the north and south, said the Russian communique as broadcast from Moscow and recorded here by the Soviet monitor.

A powerful artillery and aerial bombardment finally cracked the German defenses and big Red army tanks led the crash-through into the town. More than 5000 Germans were killed in the bitter fighting, the Russians said, and 700 were taken prisoner.

Gain 3 to 5 Miles

About 130 miles south of the new break-through, Soviet forces which toppled the former German bastion of Kharkov Monday were said to have rolled on westward from 3 to 5 miles, crushing stubborn German opposition to charge

Churchill To Continue Talks Here

Government of Liberated Lands Seen Likely Topic

By the Associated Press

Quebec, Aug. 27.—Prime Minister Churchill will rejoin President Roosevelt in Washington next week, a British government spokesman said today.

Speculation was that the two leaders again would confer on political questions involving the administrations of governments in liberated countries.

One of the agreements announced at the conferences which ended Tuesday was that this question would be taken up with representatives of governments-in-exile of countries concerned.

The suggestion also has been made that the Prime Minister and President Roosevelt would confer soon with a representative of the Soviet Russian government on the war and postwar problems.

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden was mentioned during the conferences as the Allied representative to be sent to Moscow, and the supplementary Washington meeting may have been planned to complete details for keeping Premier Joseph Stalin fully informed on the American and British plans.

The Prime Minister, Mrs. Churchill and their daughter, Mary, have been fishing near Quebec since Wednesday but will return in time for his radio broadcast, postponed from Sunday to Tuesday at 1 a. m., Eastern War Time. The speech also will be broadcast to the United States.

Boris of Bulgaria Ill in Sofia After Unpleasant Visit to Hitler

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, Aug. 27.—Reports reaching here tonight said King Boris of Bulgaria, seriously ill in Sofia, was suffering from a heart ailment after an exceedingly unpleasant two-day visit at Adolf Hitler's headquarters during which Hitler lost his temper several times and attempted to strike him.

These unverified reports said that only the timely interference of military advisers in the room had prevented Hitler from striking the King.

Hitler had demanded explosively that Bulgaria participate actively in the war and break relations with Russia, it was said, but the 49-year-old Boris replied he could not account for the reactions of his people in such an event and that it was therefore impossible for him to agree to the demands.

It was said that King Boris rushed to see Hitler last Sunday night after the Bulgarian Minister to Berlin went to Sofia, told the King that German demands were too grave to be handled through usual channels, and urged that Boris intervene personally.

Toward the end of the second day of the visit, it was said, the King suffered a heart attack, returned home by train and then had two more attacks.

The nation was asked to pray for him this morning.

Should King Boris die, Bulgaria would be left without a leader who could match his political and administrative deftness.

The heir apparent, Prince Simeon, is 6 years old. If the dynasty survived the shock of the King's death, Prince Simeon probably would rule under the regency of Prince Kyril of Preslavski, who is two years younger than the King and never has displayed any special abilities at government leadership.

Soldier's Stage Blush Deepens As Police Arrive to Probe Theft

The spotlight was focussed in double fashion yesterday on an Army private who dropped into a motion picture house on his leave in Washington.

Dolly Dawn, titian-haired crooner from New York, persuaded the soldier to step up to the stage of the Capitol Theater at her 4 o'clock show. As part of her rollicking act cramed with fun-making and nonsense, she crooned "You Made Me Love You" to the sandy-haired soldier. He blushed, gulped, and looked as if he wanted to duck out the first door marked "exit."

The soldiers, who told Miss Dawn and the audience he was a native of Washington, probably wished he had fled because Miss Dorothy Wolf, 19, of 2327 18th st. nw., didn't laugh at his predicament on the stage. Her pocketbook had been stolen last Tuesday and believing the man could explain her loss, she rushed out to notify police. Miss Wolf said the loss had occurred at the Burlington Hotel, 1120 Vermont ave. nw.

The soldier was still blushing, but for a different reason, when First Precinct Police whisked him away from the theater, turned him over to the Second Precinct Police who subsequently placed him in the custody of military police.

Allies Pressing To Take Salamaua

'Vinegar Joe'

Stilwell Seen As Deputy to Mountbatten

William Frye
Associated Press Staff Writer

Lord Louis Mountbatton left Washington last night after completing his whirlwind round of conferences with top American naval and military officials and word was circulated in informed quarters that Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell was slated to be his deputy commander in chief in the new Southeast Asia Command.

Official confirmation was lacking, and is not expected until after Mountbatten has conferred in Chungking with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. It is known, however, that the deputy command will go to an American, and Stilwell—now commander of all United States Army forces in China-Burma-India and chief of staff to the generalissimo—is said to be the choice.

"Vinegar Joe"

Mountbatten thus would gain as his second in command a man whose devoted troops call him "Vinegar Joe," the aggressive, blunt-spoken veteran of the bitter fighting in Burma and China, fully acquainted with the complex problems of that theater, whose experience as a ground forces commander would supplement Mountbatten's success as a naval and combined operations chief.

It became known also that Mountbatten will have a British chief of staff, and an American deputy chief of staff. For the latter post, speculation has mentioned Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, now commanding the United States Fifth Army in North Africa. Clark's achievements as diplomat-soldier would seem to make him a logical choice, but working against this assignment is the fact that his present command and rank are such that a job as deputy chief of staff to Mountbatten would hardly be regarded as a promotion.

Mountbatten is expected to return to London before proceeding to Chungking to discuss with Chiang the relationship between the projected campaign in Burma and the war in China. After he sees the Chinese leader, he should be able to announce the makeup of his staff and his choice for deputy commander, and to set up his headquarters—probably at New Delhi, India.

The British commando chief, named two days ago as Allied supreme commander for the new southeast Asia command, arrived in Washington Thursday from Canada and spent the afternoon in conference with Admiral Ernest J. King and in an informal—and off the record—discussion with newspaper reporters.

Yesterday morning he spent two hours at the War Department, talking with Acting Secretary John J. McCloy, Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, and Gen. H. H. Arnold, air forces commander. Then he completed his series of conferences by returning to the Navy for a brief talk with Secretary Knox.

China Pleased

Chungking, Aug. 27 (AP).—A Chinese army spokesman today hailed the appointment of Vice Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, new Allied supreme commander in southeast Asia, as meaning that "measures planned for the destruction of Japan are being implemented."

The Chinese, he said, are "very much gratified" to learn of the appointment.

The spokesman linked the recent Japanese thrust northward to Tengyueh, in Yunnan Province, with the enemy's realization that Allied recovery of Burma is being planned. The Japanese, he said, wanted to test the strength of Chinese forces there.

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 27.—The battle for the vital Salamaua air base on the northeastern coast of New Guinea approached a climax today as ground forces advanced to the edge of the field under cover of heavy artillery fire.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique today said Australian and American troops were increasing their pressure on the airdrome. This followed yesterday's statement they were within a mile of the airstrip.

(A New Guinea battlefront dispatch, delayed 36 hours, said Allied jungle fighters were almost to the edge of the field and the enemy was continuing his slow retreat.)

The ground advance followed another heavy bombing of Salamaua's supply depots. A force of nearly 100 bombers escorted by numerous P-38 Lightning fighters cascaded 180 tons of bombs upon Hansa Bay, 200 miles northwest of Salamaua.

These raiders sank a freighter, wrecked 45 barges, exploded ammunition dumps and destroyed ground installations. This attack followed the heavy bombings last week of another New Guinea supply base at Wewak.

There was no interception by Japanese planes and all Allied ships returned, although some were damaged by antiaircraft fire.

In the Solomon Islands, American troops were reported to be slowly closing in on the Nipponese at Bairoko. This garrison on the northern tip of New Georgia is made up of the only Japanese remaining on the island since the capture of the Munda airdrome on August 5.

The enemy base at Vila on Kolombangara Island across the narrow Kula Gulf from Bairoko was attacked by torpedo and dive-bombers escorted by fighters. Barge hideouts and gun positions were hit by 24 tons of bombs. Villa has been blockaded by light naval units since it was by-passed by American forces which occupied Vella Lavella Island in the northern Solomons August 15.

Vella Lavella, 45 miles north of Munda, underwent six Japanese raids Thursday. American fighters shot down 11 enemy planes and antiaircraft gunners accounted for another.

Allied planes elsewhere in the south Pacific sank a 7000-ton freighter off Kavieng, New Ireland; destroyed 19 barges or patrol boats near the Vitu Islands, 50 miles north of New Britain, and bombed and strafed enemy dumps, gun positions and the airdrome at Gasmata, New Britain.

hawks."

Walsh has served 10 years in the Marine Corps. He won his wings as an enlisted man, and was commissioned a second lieutenant last October.

Walsh never has been injured, although his planes have been shot up five times. He has made one crash landing—at Segi, New Georgia—and that after a fight over Vella Lavella in which he downed at least two planes.

Of that narrow escape, the Marine lieutenant related today that he and one other American plane on dusk patrol were jumped by eight Zeros. Pilot of the second plane was Capt. Roswell Raber, 22, Borger, Texas.

"We split," Walsh said. "I got away from the Zeros and ran into nine divebombers and got two. Then when my ammunition began running out, a Zero got on my tail and started pumping stuff into my ship. There were two cannon holes in my wing and 52 holes in my gas tank before Raber got him.

"I radioed that I was bailing out, but I regained control and managed a crash landing."

Walsh declared the armor plate behind the pilot's seat—something the Japanese don't have—saved him more than once. Several other times, he said, it was Lieut. William Johnson, Birmingham, Ala., who came to the rescue while they were on engagements together.

"He's a good flier and he has shot down about three Jap planes himself," Walsh said of Johnson.

Ace's Wife Lives Here

Lieutenant Walsh is the husband of Mrs. Beulah M. Walsh, 1228 Newton st. ne. He received his wings at Pensacola in 1937, four years after he had joined the Marine Corps. In the following years, he saw service on the plane carriers Wasp, Ranger and Yorktown.

Holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross, he became a first lieutenant two months ago.

E. R. Wakefield, Legal Aide Under 2 Presidents, Dies

Caldwell, N. J., Aug. 27 (AP).—Edwin R. Wakefield, 70, former special assistant attorney general in the Taft and Theodore Roosevelt administrations, died Thursday night at his home here.

Wakefield, a one-time assistant solicitor of the United States Treasury Department, served as chairman of the Limoges Commission, which represented the United States in tariff studies abroad. He was born in Le Claire, Iowa. Surviving are his wife and two daughters.

Sherman Tank, Feared by Foe, To Be Exhibited at Army Show

DESERT WARRIOR—Proven in North Africa and Sicily, this hard-hitting medium tank known to our fighting men as a great desert fighter will be among the impressive exhibits at "Back the Attack," on the Washington Monument Grounds September 9 to 26 inclusive

Having roared into action on many battlefronts, America's illustrious and already legendary "General Sherman" tank will be among the impressive exhibits of the Army's great show, "Back the Attack," it was announced yesterday.

"Back the Attack," sponsored by The Washington Post, and the Army's own demonstration to the people at home, was inspired by the Treasury Department as a means of carrying the information to the public as to just what their money was buying in the way of weapons and equipment in blasting the Axis. The vast exhibition will be on the Washington Monument Grounds.

Praised by our British Allies in North Africa and Sicily, the General Sherman—officially the M-4 medium tank—already has established itself as one of the great weapons of World War II.

Because it has a lowered silhouette outline with no abrupt angles which has made it a difficult target to hit, the Sherman was proven an ideal weapon for desert warfare.

Its traverse, or "revolving" turret has assured formidable and effective firepower in any direction. The major 75-caliber gun is raised and put in the traverse turret to give all around firing power.

The tank also carries machine guns with improved vision and sighting devices.

Because the M-4 tank is a cast and welded model, produced at the Chrysler-operated Detroit Tank Arsenal, mass production of this weapon during the past year has been speedy and very satisfactory.

Workingmen, despite intermittent rain, yesterday continued construction on the exhibit grounds.

Painters, electricians, ground crews, quartermaster personnel, engineers and civilians were putting finishing touches on the 126-foot stage, completing floors for the many exhibit tents, working on the flood-light system and hauling tons of sand for the huge arena and walks.

Electricians on the grounds had completed "tying in" wires for radio equipment which will be installed before the "Back the Attack" opening. Three national radio networks will broadcast programs from the grounds during the 18-day show.

Eighteen impressive pylons have been constructed, many of them already painted in national colors.

Two gilded eagles, 12 feet high and weighing approximately 2000 pounds each, were hoisted into place by means of a block and tackle. The birds will flank either side of the 126-foot stage and undergo a dolling-up operation before presentation to the first audience of the "Back the Attack" show September 9.

Laying the 300-foot track for the railhead which was begun Thursday progressed and should be completed today. A 30-ton locomotive and "several" box cars where a Quartermaster team will demonstrate loading and unloading of troops and equipment will stand on the track during the exhibition. A section crew from the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad was laying the track.

The more than half-million residents and visitors in the Nation's Capital who are expected to witness the show have been promised they will see the most complete exhibition of armament—weapons, equipment and supplies, demonstrations of the various arms of the service—ever attempted.

The spectacular and fluid demonstrations of America's armed might, which are in conjunction with the third war loan drive, will illustrate to the thousands who pass through the entrance arches of the "Back the Attack" grounds just what it costs to wage a successful war.

Visitors who wish to know the power and might of the hundreds of weapons to be assembled on the Monument Grounds have only to read the current war news of our men in battle.

Headhunters Saved Lives of 20

motor that was still functioning.

Davies went first, others followed, then it was my turn.

I was about to jump when one of the mountain peaks reared up directly under us. But there was no time to wait. Out I went, as our pilotless transport plane began to spin downward.

When my chute opened I saw the plane strike the ground and explode right below me.

I jumped from a height of about 500 feet, and if I had waited five seconds more I would have gone down in that blazing heap.

My parachute drifted rapidly toward the blazing plane. And all the while I was uttering a prayer that I wouldn't be carried into the flames.

Suddenly a gust of wind blew me into a hillside where I landed, rolling over and over through dense undergrowth. I decided that I was alive, and not hurt at all.

But I had a moment of panic when I realized that I had absolutely no idea of my whereabouts. Perhaps I was a lone survivor. And my total equipment was one penknife.

A short distance away I found our plane's radio operator, Sergt. Walter Oswald of Ansonia, Ohio. His leg was broken. I tried to make a splint and bandage his leg with the silk of his parachute. It wasn't a very professional job but he was able to hobble with me to the wreckage of the plane, where we both collapsed, exhausted and frightened.

Until the very last moment in those sickening minutes before the plane crashed Sergeant Oswald had stuck to his radio. While we were bailing out he sat frantically sending out messages of our position and calling for help.

His appeals had been heard, for within an hour after our crash a plane appeared overhead. We knew then we weren't completely lost.

Slowly the members of our party collected on a trail near an aborigine village. The group, including Davies, landed on the other side of our mountain.

Before we were assembled, I could hear natives yelling in strange jargon along the trail. I was unarmed—except for the penknife—so I rushed to the side of our pilot, who had a pistol.

But the natives came bearing food and drink. They led us to their village where they killed goats and pigs for us. These aborigines became our devoted friends.

Toward sundown of that first day—August 2—one of our air transport command planes spotted the wreckage of our plane and our signals asking for medical aid.

It was a cheering sight when a parachute blossomed from the mercy plane and three rescuers joined us, sent from the nearest Allied base, an American outpost, about 100 miles away. But so difficult is the country that it might take weeks—possibly months—for us to reach it afoot.

The three men who parachuted down to us with medical and other supplies were Lieut. Col. Don D. Flickinger, 37-year-old flight surgeon and holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross, whose home is in Long Beach, Calif., Sergt. Richard S. Passey of Provo, Utah, and Corpl. William G. McKenzie of Detroit, Mich.

Those men didn't have to jump into this wilderness and I confess that I ran to them on the hillside that evening, my eyes filled with tears of gratitude. I knew the others felt the same way.

The fact that today we are in good physical condition and in good spirits is due to the medical skill and leadership of Colonel Flickinger and to the painstaking preparations of Philip Adams, a young British political officer, who made his way to us from the India side of the frontier.

Adams quickly won the natives' friendship and organized them as pack-bearers and camp makers. He also provided us with weapons.

After Colonel Flickinger, Sergeant Passey and Corporal McKenzie dropped to our aid by parachute, planes of the Air Transport Command came over daily, dropping tents, food, clothing—even salt and trinkets for the natives upon whom we had come to rely so greatly.

These daily relief visits were organized by Gen. Edward H. Alexander, commanding the ATC (Air Transport Command) in India. He seems to think of everything for our safety and comfort. We even read Calcutta newspapers only two days old.

The natives who make up our party, those enlisted by Adams, have been grand. They are carrying Sergeant Oswald—his broken leg now held in place by expert splints prepared by Colonel Flickinger—on a bamboo chair.

One of the Chinese officers collapsed and has been carried in a makeshift litter for some distance now.

Yesterday I became a victim of the heat and exhaustion, but I'm quite all right now.

All in all, the civilians of the party seem to be standing up to it as well as the soldiers.

We have come out of our ordeal without any sufferings that a few days' rest won't cure—all except our sorrow at the loss of one of our group, Copilot Lieut. Charles William Felix, a 21-year-old flier from Compton, Calif.

Natives found his body under the wreckage of the plane when the flames had died away.

Davies Escapes Jungle on Eve Of Anniversary

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer.

A radiogram from John Davies, jr., second secretary of the American Embassy in Chungking, China, who parachuted into the Burma jungle from a disabled plane August 2, arrived yesterday for his wife, Patricia Grady Davies, indicating that he had emerged safely from the jungle, thus providing an unexpected celebration on their first wedding anniversary.

Meanwnile, the Associated Press reported that a delayed dispatch from a jungle village in India revealed that native drums were broadcasting through monsoon-drenched jungles that 18 survivors of the crash were making the long journey back to civilization.

The cable, dated August 22, declared that moving toward the outpost in single file procession were Davies, Eric Sevareid, Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent; William L. Stanton of the Office of Economic Warfare; 15 Army officers and enlisted men. With them, the news agency said, were three Air Transport Command Army men, who parachuted to the party with medical supplies and one American member of a ground rescue party.

First Anniversary

Mrs. Davies, society writer for The Post, had not heard from her husband since the accident in which husband since the accident.

The message, which arrived at The Post and was relayed to Mrs. Davies by excited coworkers in the society department, read: "Arrived outpost civilization just in time (to) send all my love on our first anniversary."

A long-distance telephone call to Mrs. Sevareid revealed that she was in Nantucket, Mass., recuperating from an appendicitis operation three days ago, and that although she had received no direct word from her husband, she had learned from the New York offices of Columbia Broadcasting System that he was safe.

Has New Assignment

"Now that I am relieved from worrying about him, I can start concentrating on my own new assignment," she told a Post reporter from her bed in the Nantucket Hospital; "I am due to report in Washington September 6 to work for the State Department in a job that will send me overseas soon."

The Sevareids formerly lived in Chevy Chase, Md., with their two children, who will go from Massachusetts to Minnesota within the next few days to stay with Mrs. Sevareid's family.

Parents Are Missionaries

Davies was born in China and his parents are still there, serving as missionaries. He has spent most of his life in the Far East, stationed in Manchuria after the Japanese occupation and then in Hankow, China, when it fell to the Jap invaders. He has been back in Washington since May, departing early in July to return to China as a member of the staff of Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell and Second Secretary of the American Embassy.

He and the former Miss Grady surprised their Washington friends a year ago when they flew to Charleston, S. C., were married at a quiet ceremony, and returned to the Capital.

Army Survivors

American Army personnel who survived the crash include:

Capt. D. C. Lee, Adjutant General's Office, base unknown; Lieut. Roland K. Lae, Central Park rd., Hicksville, N. Y.; Sergt. Joseph E. Clay, address unavailable; Sergt. Joseph J. Gigure, Auburn, Me.; Sergt. Glen A. Kittleson, Ballantine, Mont.; Sergt. Francis E. Wilder, address unavailable; Corpl. Basil M. Leoon, Tulsa, Okla.; Corpl. Edward Holland, East Cleveland, Ohio; Corpl. Lloyd J. Sherrill, Burlington, Iowa; Corpl. S. M. Waterbury, Blue Hill, Nebr.; Pvt. William Schramudt, address unavailable.

Other crew members now walking out of the jungle are the pilot, Flight Officer Harry K. Nevue of Cudahy, Wis., and Staff Sergt. Ned G. Miller of Ottumwa, Iowa.

engaged in "many combats" with enemy fighters, the communique said, with the Fortresses shooting down eight and their escorts accounting for another eight.

Four of the Fortresses were missing from the raid, but the crew of one was reported safe. Seven Allied fighters were lost during the day's operations.

The airdromes struck by the four-engined planes were not identified in the communique. Watchers on the English coast said the Fortresses streamed across the Channel for two hours.

Airfield Blasted

Earlier in the day, B-26 medium Marauders, also covered and supported by Allied Spitfires, laid heavy explosives across a German airfield at Poix in Northern France.

The Marauders and their escorts shot down two enemy fighters for a day's total of 18 German planes. One Marauder was reported missing.

Earlier an Air Ministry communique said RAF bombers had mined enemy waters last night while naval aircraft damaged four enemy minesweepers during attacks on shipping in the English Channel.

All planes returned safely, the communique added.

within 33 miles of the Nazi base of Poltava lying astride the route to the Dnieper.

Kolteva, district center 33 miles above Poltava, which changed hands several times during the bitter battles, finally fell again yesterday.

Kolteva's capture and that of Zenkov, 20 miles to the northwest, brought the surging Russians back almost 500 miles from Stalingrad, where the winter drive began. And the present summer offensive now has carried them over half the distance between Stalingrad and the Polish border.

South and southwest of Kharkov, Red Army units were swinging southward in an effort to cut German lines leading into the Donets Basin and block enemy transport between the two fronts.

Southwest of Voroshilovgrad, where the Russians are striking at a gap in the Germans' Donet Basin lines, the announcement said "our troops waged successful operations in the course of which they advanced"

More than 1000 Germans were killed in that sector, the Russians said.

West of Kharkov, where the Germans were reported also bringing up reinforcements in an attempt to plug their lines, the Russians said they killed 3000 Nazis yesterday, and reported that a three-day battle south and southwest of Akhtyrka, 60 miles northwest of Kharkov, had resulted in 2000 Germans killed and 76 tanks knocked out.

Russian bombers roared ahead to blast rail facilities at Poltava, leaving many fires.

The communique omitted reference to the immediate Bryansk sector, where Russian forces which toppled Orel have been slowed for several days by stubborn German resistance in the forests 25 miles east of Bryansk.

Mildred Selznick Sues for $650,000

Los Angeles, Aug. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Mildred Selznick filed an amended suit today in which she alleged her estranged husband, Film Producer Howard Selznick, "went Hollywood" and "evinced an inclination to annoy young women in the neighborhood."

It was her third suit for $650,000 against her husband's mother, Mrs. Florence Selznick, and his two brothers, Myron, theatrical agent, and David, producer. She charges they sought to renounce an alleged agreement to support her for life and buy her a home if she would not divorce her husband.

Mrs. Roosevelt, in Red Cross Uniform, Reaches New Zealand

By the Associated Press

Auckland, N. Z., Aug. 27.—Clad in the uniform of the American Red Cross, Mrs. Roosevelt arrived here today on a tour of American troop hospitals and Red Cross centers and immediately broadcast an appreciation to the people of New Zealand for their hospitality to American soldiers stationed here.

In a press conference she said, "I have seen as many of our troops as I could and visited numerous hospitals" en route.

"To all of them I carried a message from my husband telling them "what a grand job we at home think they have been doing."

Mrs. Roosevelt entrained for Wellington, 300 miles north of here, tonight.

(At Wellington she was met early Saturday at the railway station by Prime Minister Peter Fraser, cabinet ministers, members of United States armed forces and civic dignitaries. Her drive through the streets to Government House where she will be a guest of Governor General Sir Cyril Newall was watched by enthusiastic crowds.)

In her longest trip since moving to the White House in 1933, the President's wife added 6500 miles—the distance between this city, former New Zealand capital, and the nearest point in the United States—to her travel log.

During a visit to Great Britain last year, the President's wife toured American Army camps and recreation centers and was entertained by King George and Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham Palace. This is her second visit outside the United States since then. Last January, she made a brief trip to Canada.

Visit of First Lady News To White House Attendant

"It's news to us," said the White House switchboard operator when informed early yesterday that Mrs. Roosevelt had arrived in Auckland, New Zealand.

The operator, who declined to rouse the members of the household, said he had no information on what the much-traveled Mrs. Roosevelt might be doing in New Zealand or where she would go next.

Yanks Pound Two Airfields Near Naples

By Noland Norgaard
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Aug. 27.—American bomber armadas struck telling blows for the second consecutive day in the battle of the airdromes yesterday in a determined campaign to drive remnants of the enemy's shattered air power from southern Italian skies.

The flaming wrecks of German and Italian aircraft littering the pitted airfields of Capua and Grazzanise near Naples testified to the fury of the new aerial offensive.

While fighters and bombers paraded over the Italian toe and Sardinia, shooting up targets at will, other bombers smashed afresh at railway targets without meeting opposition—seemingly an indication that the German air force was no longer willing to defend these objectives and that the Allies had won the earlier battle of the railroads.

Italian Navy Split

The battle of the coast, too, apparently had been won long since. British warships again threw broadsides into bridges and a railway at Locri, 20 miles north of Cape Spartivento on the under side of the toe, on Tuesday night, and a British cruiser bombarded the coast near the southern end of Messina Strait the next afternoon without meeting opposition except from ineffectual shore batteries, a naval communique announced.

The remnants of the Italian navy had been cut in two by the Allied conquest of Sicily. One part was reported at La Spezia on the northwest coast and the other at Taranto on the south coast, and apparently they could not be joined to give decisive battle without first running ruinous risks.

But the Germans were still putting up a desperate defense of their airdromes and sent swarms of their fighters into the battle over Naples yesterday. Fifteen of them were sent to flaming destruction in the Naples area, and four others were shot down elsewhere, bringing the day's total to 19, Allied headquarters announced. The Allies lost seven.

Flying Fortresses peppered Capua airdrome, 17 miles north of Naples, with thousands of fragmentation and high explosive bombs.

Meanwhile twin-engined Marauders and Mitchells gave Grazzanise airfield and its satellite landing ground just north of Naples a similar pasting.

The Fortresses and their Lightning escort had to dig their way out of a circle of 45 or 50 enemy fighters, and shot down 12.

The bombers and their Lightning escort also had to combat 10 or 15 enemy fighters at Grazzanise where three more of the foe were accounted for.

In other widespread actions yesterday Warhawks swept over Sardinia, shooting up powerlines, motor transport and buildings near Guspini, 30 miles northwest of Cagliari, and the harbor of Carloforte; Mitchell bombers strafed the Locri railroad junction; A-36 Invaders dive-bombed gun positions near Reggio Calabria, and RAF Wellingtons returned to railway targets at Bagnoli in the Naples suburbs with loads of heavy bombs.

18 Die as Plane Crashes in Fog on Take-Off in Brazil

Rio De Janeiro, Aug. 27 (AP).—A three-motored Brazilian air liner struck a naval academy building in a takeoff from the Santos Dumont Airport in a fog today and 18 of the 21 persons aboard, including the Archbishop of Sao Paulo, the Most Rev. Gaspar Afonseca Esilva, were killed.

No United States citizens were known to have been on the plane.

The plane was a Junkers called "The City of Rio de Janeiro." On the first leg of the first of its two daily round trips between Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro, the plane struck the naval academy building with one wing.

The plane broke in two, one part falling into the harbor.

One of the dead was Casper Libero, publisher of the Sao Paulo newspaper A Gazeta. He returned last month from a tour of the United States with Brazilian journalists and had visited the United States previously.

Colombian Pleads Innocent to Spying

New York, Aug. 27 (INS).—Roberto Lanas Vallecilla, 35-year-old native of Colombia and former Government employe, pleaded not guilty to espionage charges in Federal Court today. His trial was set for Oct. 11.

Relations Strained Anew as Nation Protests Sinkings

By International News Service

London, Aug. 27.—Strained Swedish-German relations were put to another test today when Swedish planes attacked three German vessels by mistake a few hours after Sweden's Foreign Office filed a strong protest with Berlin over the German sinking of two Swedish fishing boats.

The Swedish radio said the planes, participating in maneuvers, were assigned to make a mock attack on three ships. Unable to find their objectives in the "target area," the pilots spotted the three German vessels nearby and the squadron leader ordered the attack.

Bullets were seen splashing near the German ships but none hit the vessels, the broadcast said, adding that the Nazi crews returned the fire.

Meanwhile, the Stockholm Foreign Office said investigation showed that all 12 crew members of the fishing vessels sunk in the Skagerrak Wednesday were killed when a squadron of German destroyers poured a broadside into them. Swedish newspapers termed the incident "a clear-cut breach of Swedish neutrality."

(An NBC broadcast from Stockholm said the Swedish note to Berlin will be "more than just another protest.")

Dane Guerillas Landed

London, Aug. 27 (INS).—Danish patriots trained and equipped in Britain are landing by parachute almost daily in fields and woods of Denmark, ready to strike the Nazis when an Allied invasion is launched, the Swedish radio said today.

The patriots, fully armed with the most modern guerilla equipment, are being flown to the strife-torn country in British planes, said the broadcast.

Meanwhile, 120 Danes went on trial today after staging a pro-Allied demonstration in Copenhagen last night which was broken up only after a Nazi tank corps trained threatening machine guns on the demonstrators, according to Finnish and Swedish broadcasts.

Saboteurs during the night twice cut Copenhagen's air-raid system; blew up a cafe in the capital frequented by Nazi troops and destroyed or damaged three locomotives in a daring raid on the Varde rail junction on the coast of Jutland, according to Danish broadcasts heard in London.

on two practice raids over terrain similar to that at Foggia so that the technique might be letter perfect.

Then, with Lieut. Col. George M. MacNicol of Memphis, Tenn., leading them, they roared across the western coast of Italy at 8:40 a. m. Wednesday less than 75 feet off the ground.

Those who planned the raid hoped the Lightnings would reach Foggia before the information could be telephoned ahead. They did. Precisely at 9 o'clock the first wave swept down, two others following in quick succession. When they streaked away seconds later scores of burning bombers and fighters were left behind. Not a single pursuit plane had risen to meet them, only scant anti-aircraft fire.

A short time later a large group of Fortresses polished off the job, adding to the destruction by battering the remaining fields with demolition fragmentation bombs.

Hull Scolds Writers, Asks Fact-Check

Secretary of State Hull said yesterday that "a few among the writers and commentators" had been "lending aid and comfort to the enemy" by making untrue statements relating to international relations of the United States.

Hull made his remarks at a press conference and then for emphasis issued them to the press for direct quotation. He volunteered his views and did not specifically connect them with any of such recent developments as the reported resignation of Undersecretary Sumner Welles or the replacement of Maxim Litvinoff as Soviet Ambassador.

The Secretary's statement:

"It is unfortunate that a few among the writers and commentators, whose utterances are easily distinguishable from those of all others in an excess of zeal for one theory or another, have dealt carelessly with the facts and have made statements which are absolutely untrue.

Suggests Checking Facts

"This relates often to international relations existing between us and other countries. It would be most helpful to this Government if they could see fit and see their way clear to check their facts as to their accuracy and possible misleading nature before they put out their publicity.

"They know and we know that too often a misleading statement or a false statement is immediately seized by Berlin and Tokyo and widely distributed with the sole view to creating confusion and misunderstanding among the Allied nations whose full cooperation is so urgently needed in the prosecution of the war.

"The sum total of these publicity operations has too often the effect of lending aid and comfort to the enemy while sometimes arousing suspicion and confusion, by reason of their false nature, among Allied nations when there is no remote call for any such misrepresentation."

Calls It Accumulation

When asked whether these latter remarks referred particularly to relations with Russia, Hull did not give a direct reply, but said it was an accumulation of this sort of practice which in more than one instance injured the relations existing among a number of the Allied nations.

Hull said he had called special attention to it today because the war was at an acute stage and the Government was doing everything possible to keep up friendly relations between the United States and all the Allies, and above all to maintain a friendly understanding and a complete spirit of wholehearted cooperation.

Hull's View Not Echoed in Full by Algiers Reports

By the Associated Press

The formal, if qualified, recognition of the French Committee of National Liberation pleased and satisfied French leaders in North Africa, Secretary of State Hull said yesterday.

Reports from Algiers, he told his press conference, show that the French regard the steps taken following the Quebec conference as a sound basis for a thoroughly happy and satisfactory understanding on an expanding basis.

While the American-British-Canadian recognition of the committee headed jointly by Generals Charles de Gaulle and Henri Giraud refrained from calling it a French government, it did accept the right of the committee to administer those overseas territories "which acknowledge its authority."

Russia has granted recognition without the specific statement that the committee is not regarded as a government. China extended recognition today on the same basis as the United States, and formal recognition came also from Peru and the Dominican Republic.

In London, French Committee informants said that the recognitions sounded the death knell of any hopes that Vichy French might have to ever dealing with the Allied powers.

Nothing to Shout About

Algiers, Aug. 27 (AP).—A spokesman of the French Committee of National Liberation said today it was hopeful that limiting conditions imposed by the United States and Britain in their recognition would not stand in the way of more complete acceptance of the committee as trustee of French interests outside occupied territories.

Although the committee's official attitude was still one of complete satisfaction with the new status, French sources here expressed differing opinions concerning the American and British limitations.

One competent French source who is closely aligned with the committee but cannot be identified by name said that the recognition, when all limitations were considered, "is neither anything for us to cheer enthusiastically nor to feel at all downhearted about."

He added, "it leaves certain basic problems unsolved. For example, nothing has yet been done toward determining what administration France shall have between the time the Germans are chased out and the time elections can be held to form a new government."

Paper Criticizes Delay

London, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Labor Party paper, Daily Herald, sharply criticized today the recognition of the French Committee of National Liberation as too long delayed. It called for creation of a permanent political council of the United Nations to improve their political planning.

300 Cars Stopped by Tax Men

STOPPED AT LINE—Internal Revenue Department inspectors last night questioned motorists at Georgia and Silver Spring aves., Md., concerning auto use stickers which they are supposed to display on their windshields. Those who had failed to buy were required to make purchases there and those whose stickers had been lost were required to make affadavits to that effect. About 30 had failed to buy the tax stamps. Many reported them lost. Three hundred cars were stopped

Tokyo Scorns Allied Aims in Burma, Japan

By the Associated Press

The Tokyo radio last night quoted Maj. Gen. Nakao Yahagi, chief of the Japanese army press section, as saying that Allied air raids on Japan proper and operations aimed at the recapture of Burma "must have been two of the main items for discussion" at the Quebec conferences.

Gen. Yahagi "bluntly voiced the conviction," however, said the Domei broadcast, the Allies will find these two aims impossible to accomplish.

The spokesman said that both President Roosevelt, and Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the U. S. Army air forces, had forecast important action from China six months ago, but that nothing had come of it.

"Not only the people of Japan but the people of China well know that the majority of American planes have been smashed and destroyed at their bases at Chungking and the hinterland before they even had an opportunity to take off to appear over Japan," he was quoted as saying.

Britain and the United States, he said, are making impossible promises of aid to China in order to prevent Chungking "from giving up the fight and joining the Nanking peace camp."

He expressed the hope that China would "awake from the existing illusion of fighting against Japan" and extricate herself from Britain and the United States "so Japan may not be compelled to liquidate it (China) by force of arms."

In another broadcast recorded by United States Government monitors it was stated Emperor Hirohito, who has been reported as "deeply concerned" over the lagging Japanese coal production, granted an audience to Kenjiro Matsumoto, cabinet adviser and president of the coal control association, who explained conditions in the industry.

Relief for Fathers

Maybank Asks Drafting Of Illiterates

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Induction into the Army and Navy of physically fit illiterates to reduce the drain on pre-Pearl Harbor fathers yesterday was urged on War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt by Senator Burnet R. Maybank (Democrat) of South Carolina.

Following a talk with McNutt, Maybank said the War Manpower director promised to carry the suggestion to Army and Navy chiefs, with recommendation that stiff literacy standards be abandoned for "brawn" assignments in the armed forces.

Thousands Released

"In South Carolina alone, some 2000 white inductees, and another 10,000 colored, have been released from the Army since the start of the year because they could not meet literacy tests," Maybank told newsmen.

"These men are physically trim. They could replace other soldiers in many types of work. Brawn as well as brains is needed in the Army. Even then we would still have to draft a lot of fathers. But I favor calling single men and illiterates first."

Passing through Washington, following a speaking tour of New England in behalf of the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill postwar peace resolution, the South Carolinian again declared for the Austin-Wadsworth national service bill, and opposed Senate and House moves to stop the fathers draft.

A bill by Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana to block the fathers draft, is pending on the Senate calendar and is likely to be the first business before Congress on September 14.

To Call Some Fathers

Maybank said he would "do everything in my power" to defeat it: "No one wants to draft fathers, but who are we to tell the Army that it doesn't need men? I'll take the Army's word on that and some fathers will have to go. But by using our physically fit we can greatly reduce the number."

In Miami, Fla., meanwhile, another Administration Senator declared for national service legislation and predicted some fathers would have to be drafted to meet military needs. He was Senator Lister Hill (Democrat) of Alabama, Senate majority whip, author of the first national service bill to be introduced in Congress.

Hill told Miami newsmen that as soon as Congress convenes he would press for enactment of his own measure, modeled after the British universal service act and empowering the President to invoke total mobilization.

Congress May Get in Army Court Dispute

By the Associated Press

The possibility Congress may be asked to intervene in the Hawaiian dispute over suspension of the writ of habeas corpus was acknowledged here yesterday by Federal officials. They said they hoped, however, the agencies examining the situation might arrive at a solution.

Should a solution not be reached during conferences now being held by the Justice, War and Interior Departments, it is possible also the issue may be referred to the President or to the Supreme Court.

Officials who have examined legal precedents for suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, by which a man is guaranteed his day in his country's civilian courts, cite a law of March 3, 1863, in which Congress authorized President Lincoln to suspend the writ. The congressional authority supported a proclamation issued by Lincoln the preceding year.

If the issue were referred to Congress, they said, it might be by introduction of a bill to pay the $5000 fine imposed on Lieut. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, jr., commanding general of the Army's Hawaiian Department, for contempt of court when he failed to produce two prisoners in compliance with a writ of habeas corpus issued by Federal Judge Delbert Metzger.

The prisoners, American citizens of German ancestry, allegedly have been held incommunicado by the Army since shortly after the bombing of Pearl Harbor. In issuing his writ, Metzger declared if the jurisdiction of the courts was restored in part it must be restored in full, including the right to grant writs of habeas corpus.

His reference was to a proclamation of Governor Ingram M. Stainback of Hawaii restoring functions to civilian authorities there, following more than a year of military government in the Territory, but continuing suspension of the writ habeas corpus and continuing martial law.

De Marigny Not Witness In Own Behalf

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 27 (AP).—Tall, bearded Alfred de Marigny listened today to the last of the prosecution's testimony linking him with the murder of his wealthy father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes, then elected to wait for a later opportunity to speak out in his own defense.

The expected closing of the preliminary hearing for De Marigny was delayed when Attorney Godfrey Higgs asked permission to place one witness on the stand, a rare move for the defense in British procedure.

Prison Physician to Be Witness

Higgs explained that his witness, Dr. Ulrich Oberwarth, expects to be absent from the colony in October, and might not be available to testify if De Marigny is held for jury trial. Oberwarth was the prison physician when De Marigny was arrested July 9, the day after Sir Harry's bludgeoned and burned body was found.

Magistrate F. E. Field kept the hearing alive until next Tuesday, and reserved his decision whether the evidence warrants a jury trial.

As soon as the final prosecution witness—John Herbert Anderson, managing director of the Bahamas General Trust—had completed his testimony, Field asked De Marigny whether he wished to say anything, warning him that his words might be used against him at a trial.

De Marigny Remains Silent

The handsome husband of Sir Harry's eldest daughter, Nancy, remained silent as he leaned over a rail and stroked his Van Dyke beard.

Anderson reported meeting De Marigny the morning of July 8 and telling him that Sir Harry was dead. "He was incredulous," the witness continued, "and asked 'Are you kidding?' "

He told of various financial transactions with De Marigny, and said that the defendant early this year asked his help in compromising financial differences between him and his divorced wife, Ruth, who had threatened a lawsuit over $130,000 she contended was owed to her. Anderson quoted De Marigny as saying earlier this year that "Sir Harry was drinking himself to death."

Probe Continues

Farnsworth Hurt in June, Star Reveals

By International News Service

Hollywood, Aug. 27.—Investigators today learned from Screen Star Bette Davis that the death Wednesday night of her husband, Arthur Farnsworth, might have been the result of an injury suffered two months ago.

Authorities are probing the possibility that he was a victim of foul play, possibly because of his knowledge of war production. As a representative of an aircraft precision instrument firm his work took him to numerous war plants.

The autopsy surgeon estimated that the fractured skull which caused Farnsworth's death was incurred from two days to two weeks before his collapse on Hollywood blvd. Monday night.

Miss Davis said that Farnsworth, in going to answer the telephone, fell down stairs late in June, hurting his head and back.

Judge, Sty-mied Again, Gives Up His Half of Pig

Detroit, Aug. 27 (AP).—In an effort to end all discussion about his half of a pig and pork delicacies as well, Federal Judge Frank A. Picard today relinquished all rights to a porker he owned jointly with a Saginaw dentist.

All week public attention has been focused on the problem of just how Judge Picard could kill his pig and have it too. OPA officials met him at every turn with regulations. First he was told he must surrender ration points for the pig. Later, when he thought of pooling points, he was told that wouldn't do either.

Then the proposal was advanced that he butcher the animal himself. Regulations prevented that, too. Finally he learned the pig must be quarantined because of a cholera outbreak. That was enough for the judge.

Evidence Held Justifying Probe of FCC

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 27.—Eugene L. Garey, counsel for the Cox congressional committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission, said at the conclusion of the New York inquiry today that evidence presented here "amply justifies and supports widespread accusations leveled against the commission."

Summing up the testimony, Garey said two accusations against the FCC were "that it has set up a group commonly called the 'Gestapo' for the purpose of unlawfully dominating the radio industry and rendering it subservient to its will, and that the 'Gestapo,' under the guise of lawful and proper investigation, is violating the constitutional rights of individuals. These, he said, were among the accusations supported by the evidence.

Employe Discharged

Final testimony before the inquiry, which adjourned without date, dealt with letters from officials of the OWI, RCC, and Office of Censorship to a former announcer on foreign language radio station WBNX disclaiming any ability to assist him in his efforts to return to the air after his dismissal from the station.

Lido Pelli, a time broker for the station, previously had testified he dismissed the announcer, Alfonso Vanacore, at the insistence of Lee Falk, radio chief of the OWI foreign division, Alan Cranston, chief of the division, and Giuseppe Facci of the Italian division.

To clarify testimony given yesterday by an Italian-born radio censor-translator, Duccio Tabet, Garey stated that Tabet had testified that he had deleted from a radio script the phrase, "Peace on earth good will towards men" because it failed to comply with the station's censorship code

Tabet Denies Deletions

Although the transcript of the testimony was not available, Garey and Earl Menderman, director of information of the FCC, agreed that Tabet said he also had deleted, for the same reason, a line "similar in sentiment" to the Lord's Prayer.

However, the radio station, WOV, in a statement today said that Tabet denied the deletions.

Garey said another subcommittee, headed by Louis Miller (Republican) of Missouri would begin hearings in Washington Monday when testimony would be presented concerning Selective Service status of FCC employes.

4-F Youth Says Farmer Kept Pay

he was afraid to testify for me because he feared losing his job as tenant farmer.

"My father is 62 and cannot easily get another place. I worked up to last Saturday, and Sunday I was ill. I could not work Monday or Tuesday and did not work. Bussard reported me to police on Monday for not working. On Wednesday Bussard told me in front of my mother that I had to get off the property and my mother said 'if he goes we will go, too.'

"I was told to leave at about 12:30 Wednesday and did so. I walked down the road to an old store and was waiting for a ride to town to seek work when I was arrested."

Wage Question

Just why the Rockville Police Court judge, Donald A. De Lashmutt, or Assistant District Attorney Alfred Noyes did not investigate Day's case was not made clear by them. Judge De Lashmutt said he did not consider the draft classification and said he thought the prevailing wage, as defined in the Maryland law, was "whatever farmers can get men to work for."

Noyes, the assistant State's attorney, yesterday suggested that "some lawyer volunteer his services to defend the youth."

Had no Copy of Law

Judge De Lashmutt tried the case, he said, without a copy of the law because "there was only one copy and the State's attorney has it."

State's Attorney Joseph B. Simpson, jr., stepped into the picture yesterday and issued a statement in which he "requested that anyone knowing of a case of violation of the 'work or fight' law report such violation to the local police department or to the office of the State's attorney," indicating a campaign to round up, with public support, men who refuse to accept poorly paid jobs.

Simpson said the title of the law was incorrect and did not define the act or its intent. Judge De Lashmutt termed the law a "sort of vagrancy" law.

Attorney Benjamin G. Wilkinson, former State's attorney, who drew up the bill while serving in the Maryland Legislature, said "it is a good bill, but I think there is a story in this." Day, in his jail cell, said he would be glad to have Wilkinson represent him to secure an appeal.

Simpson would not concede young Day had been done an injustice, either because of his 4-F classification or because of the background of the case. He said the youth did not work and that Bussard reported it, causing the youth's arrest.

"It's the law, we didn't write it, we only enforce it," he said.

Asked how many others had been arrested, Simpson said "none."

Although admittedly unconcerned about Day's being thrown into jail, authorities refused photographers the right to make pictures of the youth, either in his cell or in a jail hall, in accordance with a ruling by the court "protecting" the interests of those who come before it.

Wage Held Too Low

He said farmers constantly complain because men in the town will not work at wages offered. The wages paid and offered day is $1.75 less per day than the prevailing wage in that area, according to D. D. Wilson of the Maryland Crop Reporting Service of the University of Maryland.

Farmers, when asked to sign complaints against men who won't work, refuse to do so, Simpson said, for fear of reprisals by the men "who might get angry." Fears that men thrown into jail would burn barns on their release were freely expressed in Rockville yesterday by farmers, while townsfolk did not hesitate to condemn the sentencing of young Day, who finds it hard to speak clearly and has bad eyes.

The law, Simpson stated, is far-reaching. A person between 16 and 60, no matter if he is rich, retired or living from the income of bonds, or supported by others, is subject to arrest if not working five days a week if some one has offered him a job and it is refused.

The law allows for such a hypothetical case as this: A grocery store owner may offer a job to a retired wealthy man and if the wealthy man refuses to accept the job and is physically able to do the work, the would-be employer simply swears to a complaint and the rich man is jailed, tried and, as in the case of Day, convicted.

The penalty can be up to $500 fine and six months in jail, or both.

Applies to 14 Counties

Although it is a Maryland State law, it does not apply to all the State. Only 14 of the 23 counties are covered. Prince George's County, adjacent to Washington on the northeast, did not want the law.

The counties in which it applies are Caroline, Harford, St. Marys, Somerset, Kent, Wooster, Wicomico, Anne Arundel, Cecil, Montgomery, Dorchester, Talbot, Baltimore County, Queen Anne.

Day has 15 days from the date of his conviction to appeal, under the law. Simpson said he would not ask high bond from the youth if he obtained counsel and an appeal was asked. Simpson also said Judge De Lashmutt probably would be willing to appoint counsel if the youth asks.

The State's attorney said the law became effective April 1 and would remain in force for "the duration until a treaty is signed, or there is a presidential proclamation announcing no further fighting."

Absentees to Be Fired

Bracken Assails Carriers Of Separate Peace Rumors

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 27.—Assailing what he called "a lot of unconscious fifth columnists" who are spreading the rumor that Russia might seek a separate peace with Germany, Brendan Bracken, British Minister of Information, said today that such talk fostered Hitler's hope of dividing the United Nations and winning a political victory.

"It is foolish to assume that Marshal Stalin's inability to attend the (Quebec) conference or the shifting of ambassadors is any indication that Russia is going to make some arrangement with Germany," Bracken said in a press conference here.

"I think," he added, "that Stalin really cannot spare the time just now for conferences. It is highly insulting to Russia to suggest that she might drop out of the war."

Spread by Germany

He said Germany would be pleased to make a separate peace, but unable to do so, had spread the rumor about Russia.

"I believe that Hitler knows from a military point of view that he can't win the war, but through political action to divide the United Nations he might escape consequences," he said. "Politically Hitler is a man of the greatest cunning and adroitness. I believe he has real hopes of dividing the United Nations and that a lot of people are unconsciously fostering that hope."

If Germany gains its objective by dividing the United Nations, Bracken declared, she "will have lost the war from a military point of view and won it from a political point of view."

Lesson for Nazis

The Information Minister said that "the best education for Germany is Air Chief Marshal (Sir Arthur) Harris (of the RAF)."

"He can teach them a lesson they want to know," he declared. "War to them has been a most profitable investment and never has been fought on their own soil. They are going to get such a dose in the next six months that Germany is going to feel there is a lot of soundness in the Quaker religion."

The decisions at the Quebec conference, he said, would be translated in terms of action on the field of battle, and he said he rejoiced in "the complete unity of thought between the United States military and our own."

Must Ease Burden

"We want to take the burden off Soviet Russia as quickly as we can; we realize what she is doing and the cost of millions of lives involved," Bracken said. "At any cost, we must do our best to take some of the load off her shoulders."

As for the Japanese, Bracken said they would have to settle for atrocities with Britain and the United States.

Regarding the Indian situation, the British minister said Britain had every intention of fulfilling its pledges soon after the peace was made, but that in such an important base, wartime was no time for "peripatetic oratory."

2000 Answer Appeal to Unload War Supplies

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—College students, sailors on leave, white collar workers, union truckers and others in many walks of life today answered a Government appeal for help in unloading thousands of freight cars bearing war supplies to the New York port area.

An acute shortage of manpower, delaying the unloading and tying up materials needed by American and Allied forces, led the War Shipping Administration to make the appeal.

By tonight, approximately 2000 persons had volunteered and Robert M. Ware, District Manager of the United States Railroad Retirement Board, said about 5000 would be needed.

19 German Prisoners Escape In Canada; 12 Are Captured

By the Associated Press

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 27.—Sixteen of the 19 German prisoners of war who tunneled their way to freedom last night under the stone walls of Fort Henry were back in custody tonight, one captured by a woman armed only with a flashlight.

The greatest search ever conducted in the Kingston district was being made for those still at large. It was international in scope with U. S. Army and Coast Guard detachments and civilian police patrolling along the south bank of the St. Lawrence River.

In the largest break in Canada since 28 men tunneled to freedom from a northwestern Ontario camp in April, 1941, the 19 men dug an elaborate tunnel under the fort's walls and upward to the crest of a small hill facing the St. Lawrence. Prison camp authorities reported the prisoners had no help from outsiders. All who escaped in the 1941 break were recaptured except two who were killed.

A routine check was being made of the prisoners last night when a report came through from police a man believed to be an escaped prisoner had been apprehended at Dead Man's Bay, a mile and one-half from the camp. The completed check quickly disclosed 19 were missing.

Gertrude McDermott, a summer resident of the Dead Man's Bay area, said today she was sitting with her sister, Ida McDermott, and their brother, Dr. Francis McDermott, of Detroit, on her cottage veranda when she saw a man run up from the water and into a clump of bushes.

"I ran to the bushes with the flashlight and shouted at the German to come out," she said. "Meekly he crawled out from under the bushes, threw his hands over his head and said 'I come, I come.' My brother grabbed the flashlight and pointed it at the prisoner while I ran into the house to call the police."

She said the prisoner told them he had lived in Los Angeles and had been free four hours when captured.

Remarking a number of previous tunneling attempts were discovered by guards, an official at the prison camp said, "you can't pitch a no-run game in this guarding of prisoners. They are ingenious and we are bound by certain restrictions which prevent us unearthing some of their attempts to escape."

Is This America?

The thirteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States declares that "neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States." Yet in the neighboring State of Maryland a young man has been given a 30-day jail sentence because he refused to work for a complainant farmer "at prevailing wages." We pass over the fact that the magistrate who imposed the sentence under Maryland's so-called "Work or Fight Act" made no attempt to determine whether the youth was physically fit to undertake the work. We pass over the fact that the culprit had been rejected for Army service and classified 4-F. These details are irrelevant to the main issue, although they arouse justified indignation because they show a callous disregard of extenuating circumstances that might account for the idleness of the accused.

Ultimate responsibility for the incarceration of a free American for exercising his right to refuse a job rests with the Maryland Legislature that passed the "Work or Fight Act." Forced mobilization of labor on a nationwide scale to assist prosecution of the war could be justified as a Federal war measure. The States, however, are expressly forbidden to wage war except in case of invasion or imminent danger of invasion. Constitutional issues aside, nothing but confusion worse confounded could possibly result from imposing State systems of forced labor upon the semicompulsory haphazard system outlined by the War Manpower Commission.

Loss In Bombers

In the raids which the R. A. F. and the U. S. A. A. F. are carrying out on German cities the main objective is, of course, to do as much damage as possible to enemy factories, power plants, railroads, submarine yards, and German morale. An incidental but very important by-product of these raids is the whittling down of the Luftwaffe's fighter strength.

This is seen in the War Department's report of the Eighth Air Force's recent raid on Schweinfurt, Germany. In that raid, in which damage was done to three important ball and roller-bearing works as well as to rail communications in the area, we lost 33 heavy bombers. There can be no discounting the severity of this loss. It reflects the increase of and improvement in the defensive effort made by the Nazis to protect the Schweinfurt area. At the same time, however, no fewer than 147 enemy fighters were shot down by our Flying Fortresses, in addition to those shot down by American bombers which did not succeed in returning to their base, and thus did not report what they had done.

It is no secret that, of late, Germany has been easing off in the construction of bombers and concentrating on the construction and improvement of fighters. The purpose is, of course, to increase the Reich's defensive strength. But, as the Schweinfurt experience shows, its fighter losses are considerable, though those losses would be far greater if we could step up the numbers we are employing on the bombing raids. Time is of the essence when the enemy is so evidently concentrating on defense.

Another Bottleneck

So far there has been surprisingly little complaint of freight congestion on the railroads. Indeed, the record of accomplishment has been amazing, considering the tremendous increase in business caused by the war. Current reports indicate, however, that a transportation tie-up of menacing proportions threatens along the Atlantic seaboard because of an insufficiency of freight handlers. Cars loaded with equipment for our forces overseas and lease-lend materials are backing up at terminal points, and appeals are being made for additional men to hasten unloading.

Various reasons are assigned for this acute shortage of manpower. Partly it is the result of the quickened war tempo and the marked expansion of lease-lend shipments. It is also the result of failure to set up a system for mobilizing manpower that would prevent piratical employers from drawing away labor employed on essential warwork by offering higher pay.

Lately very little has been said about the "feather-bed" rules that result in an egregious waste of manpower on our railroads. While the operating employes of the train and engine services are the chief beneficiaries of feather bedding, waste motion anywhere spells aggravated shortages of labor elsewhere. Perhaps the transportation tie-up will have the incidentally beneficial result of once more directing public attention to union rules that force railway managements to use labor extravagantly even in time of war.

Gasoline Rationing

The Post has been taken to task by both the Office of Price Administration and the Petroleum Administration for War for its editorials criticizing continuation of the pleasure driving ban. Perhaps we went too far in concluding that the policy of equalizing gasoline supplies between the East and the West should have brought immediate abolition of the ban. We assumed that the equalization program announced two weeks ago by Secretary Ickes was further advanced than it actually is. Certainly we had no intention of urging that restrictions be relaxed before gasoline is actually available to supply the larger demands.

Because many others may have expected quick results from the PAW's equalization policy, we think it is desirable to set down a few facts that have a bearing on the situation. Since the PAW announced that the flow of oil products to the Midwest, Southwest and East would be equalized, no increase has been made in the allotment of gasoline for consumption in civilian automobiles in the Eastern States. PAW takes the position that it must build up inventories in this area before additional gasoline can be released for public consumption, and of course the OPA cannot reasonably ration out to the public gasoline that is not to be had. In other words, neither agency was able to put the equalization policy into effect at the time it was announced. But both apparently have every intention of evening the flow of gasoline throughout the area east of the Rocky Mountains as soon as possible.

The refusal of the PAW to make a larger allocation of gasoline to the East so long as inventories are dangerously low has not prevented an increased flow of motor fuel to this area. Indeed, the PAW is steadily increasing the volume of oil brought into the East, as is reflected in the slight gain in inventories last week. When a sufficient reserve is on hand to protect the public against local shortages and permit a smooth flow of gasoline between refineries and the public, rationing will be fully equalized as between the Midwest, Southwest and East. Attainment of that condition should not be far distant, for the carrying capacity of the new pipe lines is being stepped up rapidly.

Most of the controversy at present arises over the fact that motorists in each section of the country are burning more gasoline than has been allotted to the respective sections by the PAW. The cut in coupon values in the Midwest and Southwest has brought an insignificant curtailment of actual gasoline deliveries thus far. The East, too, is consuming about 35,000 barrels a day in excess of its allotment. Here is a problem of mammoth proportions for the OPA. The rationing system will never work smoothly unless actual consumption can be brought more nearly into line with regional allocations.

Perhaps the picture appears blacker at the moment, however, than it actually is. Some of the overdrafts in the West may be due to the replenishment of dealers' supplies drawn low by the general filling of automobile tanks before the value of the coupons was reduced. In the East at least part of the consumption in excess of allotments is explained by the breakdown of the pleasure-driving ban. Now both the OPA and the PAW have contributed to the breakdown of that offensive regulation. The OPA did so by allowing motorists with A-cards to use their gallon and a half of gasoline a week for vacations under certain circumstances. Why should one hesitate to drive to the movies or the races, the public reasoned, when it is permissible to drive to a summer resort? The PAW helped to give the pleasure-driving ban its coup de grace when it announced the equalization policy. In the circumstances we do not believe that the ban can be revived as an effective restraint on the consumption of gasoline. Whether it lifts the ban next week or several weeks hence, however, the OPA is under a heavy obligation to tighten up enforcement of its rules against black markets and fraudulent coupons.

Much of the present confusion arises from the fact that the PAW announced an equalization policy before it could bring about equalization in fact. Patience on the part of the public is needed to bridge the gap between expectations thus aroused and actual performance. Meanwhile we believe that the best means of making the more liberal policy in the East a reality is for the OPA to crack down on the black markets while the PAW continues to bend every effort toward building up gasoline reserves in the East.

Habeas Corpus

The conflict of authority between a Federal judge and a military commander involves a question of tremendous importance—one which has arisen more than once in the history of the United States but has never been resolved. The question is whether citizens arrested by the military authorities in military areas and in time of war are entitled to petition for writs of habeas corpus and whether civil courts have authority to issue such writs. On this point the Constitution (Article 1, section 9) says merely that the privilege "shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it." The Bill of Rights (Article VI) guarantees a speedy and public trial in all criminal cases.

The situation at Honolulu where the test case has arisen appears to be this: At the time of Pearl Harbor two Americans of German antecedents were among those arrested by the military and held incommunicado. At the time of the arrests Hawaii was under martial law. On March 10 of this year Governor Stainback issued a proclamation declaring that jurisdiction had been restored to the civil authorities. This proclamation Judge Delbert E. Metzger has interpreted as restoring the right of habeas corpus. On this basis Judge Metzger held suspension of the writ of habeas corpus by the Army authorities to be invalid. Accordingly he ordered Lieut. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, jr., to appear in his court this week and show cause why he should not be held in contempt for refusing to recognize such writs. When General Richardson did not appear, he was held in contempt and the court imposed a fine of $5000. General Richardson promptly retaliated by issuing an order forbidding any judge in his military district to hold any habeas corpus proceeding, and ordering the provost judge to try any civilian judge who attempted to violate the order.

Thus the question appears to have come to a showdown such as was avoided in similar cases during the Civil War. Since the reference to the suspension of habeas corpus occurs in the article of the Constitution dealing with the powers of Congress, it seems clear that the right to authorize suspension of habeas corpus rests with Congress. In 1863 Congress authorized the President to suspend the right when the interests of safety demanded. The Supreme Court, however, held that such suspensions are subject to appeal and judicial review, a decision which apparently would put final authority in the hands of the courts.

In some instances in the Civil War military commanders refused to recognize writs issued by courts and even in one instance a writ issued by the Chief Justice himself. The courts, however, while admitting their inability to enforce such writs against the military power, have consistently refused to admit that the military have any right to ignore them.

The Honolulu case is significant because it raises all sort of implications concerning long established liberties in an age in which the Fifth Column has become a standard and accepted technique of warfare. It has not, of course, been established that any of the 300 or more persons now in military custody in Hawaii is a Fifth Columnist. Nothing, in point of fact, has been established, since there has been no public hearing. On the other hand, the theoretical existence of a Fifth Column might seem to afford that condition of "invasion or rebellion" which the Constitution stipulates as one of the conditions under which habeas corpus may be suspended. Here, then, is yet another instance of the great dilemma in which we now find ourselves, and of the riddle to which sooner or later we must find an answer: To what extent can we safely surrender our traditional liberties in order to wage a war in defense of those liberties?

Uneasy Armistice

Clarence Budington Kelland, one of those Republicans fond of disparaging the Four Freedoms and the Atlantic Charter, has now submitted his own blueprint for the future. He is to be commended for its clarity and its specificity. It is useful to have a definite statement of the views held by him and presumably by others who shared his isolationist position prior to our participation in the war. They have come a long way since Pearl Harbor. But they still fall short, it seems to us, of an approach to the kind of world which is worth fighting for.

Mr. Kelland has no faith in what he calls a "Utopian superstate." Instead of collective security, he would place his reliance for American security, first, on a mutual assistance accord among the victors; second, on an Anglo-American alliance; third, on enormous armaments. It is this third point that bothers us. Mr. Kelland's world would appear to be nothing better than an armed camp suspended forever on the brink of hostilities by an uneasy armistice. In such a world we should be living perpetually under a military economy in a state of military preparedness. Specifically Mr. Kelland wants a five-ocean Navy, a powerful standing Army, and an air force so numerous and so powerful as to stand alone. Our Nation "must stand panoplied, equipped to the last button, and ready for war." It is hard to see how Mr. Kelland's universe differs in any essential respects from the kind of universe we are waging this war to avert and overcome.

THE NIGHT FLYING BAT

Departing sun shades air and trees,
And draws itself away from these.
Before light is entirely gone,
We see a tiny pattern drawn
By skimming wings that twist and turn
Where the last sunset colors burn.
The mouse-gray bat on flickering wings
Climbs the large night, looks into things.
The first star fits into the sky
And watches the hooked wings go by.
There is a gush on pine and oak—
The night wind furls itself like smoke;
While there is nothing on the hill,
This bat draws up its patterns still.

Good Neighbors

New Trade Trend

ONE OF the most important of several kinds of development that war is forcing on Latin America is increase in trade among Latin-American nations themselves. This applies directly to postwar problems this Nation must meet as we walk the tight-rope toward permanent peace.

Recent experience has proved how dangerous it is for our southern neighbors to be economically weak. It hasn't been long since we discovered a German commercial drive there being turned into political penetration that was part of a scheme to use Latin America as path of attack on us.

That area was exposed to begin with because they were selling from 40 to 50 per cent of their exports to Europe and buying 40 per cent or more of their imports there. The Nazis used fancy economics to get a hold on a large share of this trade and used it as a political weapon and channel for propaganda and espionage.

What has been done once can be done again, so obviously the New World will be safer in the future if Latin America depends less on nonhemisphere sources and markets.

One way to become independent is for them to make more of their own goods. They will do this, but industrialization will not come overnight. And international trade will always be vital to them.

Increase Our Trade

We will without doubt increase our trade with Latin America in the postwar, but in order for us to take enough to relieve their dependence on Europe, we might have to stop buying from other areas where we have had good trade. Many of these are under the British flag. To drop them would cause both political and economic repercussions.

If Latin-American nations can do enough of their international trading among themselves, it will aid New World stability without creating new and difficult snarls in our world relations.

These countries have not dealt among themselves because their trade patterns were traced to Europe in colonial times. They have never been developed to produce for each other. Communications have been roundabout, shipping largly foreign-owned. This was true up to the eve of World War Two, when a few countries were trying to change things.

War severely cut European sources and limited supplies we could send. It also stranded their exports. Latin Americans had to find ways to supply each other.

One of the most spectacular increases has been in trade between Mexico and Central American countries. Since war broke out, Mexico has rushed completion of a railroad bridge over the Suchiate River, her southern boundary, making it possible to ship overland to Central American countries for the first time. Today they are drawing on Mexico for processed foods, glassware, cotton goods, even mining machinery.

Brazil Shipping Tires

Brazil is shipping tires and tubes to Venezuela. She is selling 100 per cent more drugs and chemicals to Colombia than formerly. She is shipping textiles, lumber and iron to Argentina, where she gets wheat.

Little Costa Rica is selling cacoa advantageously to Colombia, Peru and Chile. She is selling foodstuffs to Panama, chemical fertilizer to other Central American neighbors. She is buying matches from Honduras. Honduras is exporting hog lard to Mexico.

Ecuador is buying chemicals, wool and cotton cloth, raw cotton, lard, vegetable oils from Argentina. She is selling shoes to Colombia, rice to Venezuela, Bolivia, Cuba and Argentina. Uruguay is selling dried beef to Puerto Rico.

Argentina is sending cheese to Venezuela, auto tires to Colombia, beef and wheat to Bolivia and medicines, articles of glass, leather and knit goods to a number of countries.

Speeding this new commercial trend is a movement to lower tariff duties.

Brazil has made reciprocal arrangements with Chile, Argentina, Paraguay, Bolivia. Chile has signed one with Mexico. Argentina has agreements with Cuba, Chile, Peru and Colombia. Panama, Bolivia and Costa Rica have lowered duties on neighbors' goods.

El Salvador has full free trade agreements with Guetemala and Honduras, the first of the kind in the hemisphere.

If enough of these agreements are made, the New World, where we already have a wide network of reciprocal trade arrangements, will have something approaching an informal and spotty customs union.

This trend is very significant, since it shows a way through which the New World republics can meet post-war competition from old sources of supply and can continue their new and politically stabilizing commercial exchanges in the future.

Crust For Algiers

By Barnet Nover

The French Committee Recognized

ON THE PRINCIPLE that, for a starving man, a crust of stale bread is better than nothing at all, spokesmen for the French Committee of National Liberation have welcomed the "recognition" granted that committee by the Quebec conferees.

The French have a saying that "it's the first step that counts." After months of tortuous diplomacy which reflected no credit on the White House or the State Department, we have now taken the first step toward recognizing France as a nation which, though conquered, must have a voice in Allied councils.

This is all to the good. But it is not good enough.

IT IS EVIDENT that the President's statement regarding the French committee was issued only under pressure and with great reluctance. It was rude, ungracious and full of reservations.

But the same circumstances that compelled us to go this far will compel us to go further. For it is not merely that the French will insist on being heard but that our Allies will insist that they be heard.

Had the Administration possessed the statesmanship which the handling of this French problem called for, the recognition of the Algiers committee could have been made into a resounding demonstration of United Nations unity. But those responsible for the handling of this problem were too frozen in their past attitudes, too anxious to justify their past errors, to make an easy and gracious about face.

The result is that however welcome the move now made not only by us but also by Great Britain, Canada and Russia it reflects not the unity of the United Nations but their disunity.

A READING of the notes issued on this matter by the British, Canadian and American governments, let alone the Russian, reveals that unhappy fact in all its grim outlines.

So far as the limitations they imposed upon their recognition of the French committee are concerned, Great Britain, the United States and Canada are in substantial agreement. All three insist that their statements do not constitute recognition of the committee as the government of France or of the French Empire. All three insist that the committee will function on the principle of collective responsibility. And all three make the point that the military requirements of the Allied commanders must be paramount to the rights, privileges and authority of the Algiers body.

But whereas our note lays down the law to the committee in just so many words, without circumlocution and also without grace, the Canadian and British notes reflect a solicitude for French feelings which is both more diplomatic and wiser.

BUT THE GREATEST divergence is between the position taken by the Quebec conferees and Soviet Russia.

The Russian note recognizes the Algiers committee as "representative of the state interests of the French republic." This means that the committee, in Russian eyes, is the temporary repository of French sovereignty and French authority, that it can speak in the name of Frenchmen everywhere, and that, in effect, the French are not wards of the Allies but equal partners.

Russia does not, no more than do Great Britain, Canada and the United States, recognize the French committee as the government of France. Nor, for that matter, has the committee ever asked for that status, even though it is the status we have granted the Czechoslovak government-in-exile and all other governments-in-exile regardless of whether they are representative of the population they are supposed to represent or not.

The fact of the matter is there is no way of knowing how representative any exiled government is. But the myth that they are representative is being carefully observed by us in the case of those governments. The only exception we have made in this regard is with respect to France.

WE WERE NOT so finicky in the case of Vichy whom we recognized as the government of France after the collapse, even though its constitutional authority was dubious to say the least.

Nor were we so finicky in recognizing the post-Vichy regime of Admiral Darlan in North Africa as the sovereign agency for that region. In fact the principal excuse for our failure to do the many things that needed being done in North Africa in the months following our landing, was that we had no right to interfere in internal affairs of a friendly area.

Somewhere, along the line from Vichy to Darlan to Giraud to the French Committee of Liberation, French sovereignty was suspended, in the eyes of our State Department pundits.

But facts are reasserting themselves and will continue to do so. We can only hope that the partial recognition given Algiers is the last chapter in a book now closed rather than the opening chapter in a new tragedy of confusion.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

Mitchell and Chennault

It was with a great deal of pleasure that I read in the Los Angeles Times the two editorials which appeared in your paper under dates of August 13 and 16, and I am glad that you appear to be giving national publicity to same, as they are splendid editorials and certainly to the point.

They bring to mind the persecution of the lamented Billy Mitchell when he pointed out the importance of the plane and bomber, and predicted that in the next war the air force would be the most important arm of the service. He was so far in advance of these stupid brass hats, and even went out and blew up an old battle wagon to show them what could be done. The events of today are proving the correctness of General Mitchell's predictions.

Another case in point is that of Chennault. He was another man of vision and while teaching in the military school at Maxwell Field, Ala., was denounced as a "smart Alec" by his inferiors and retired by them to private life. When this war came on he was not wanted in our Army, so offered his services to the Chinese, and we know what he has done with the 50 or 60 old Curtiss-Wright crates which have had to be kept in shape with home-made parts and baling wire! Every theory he had been teaching has been more than proven, yet he cannot get planes. He and Uncle Joe Stilwell came home and pleaded with Washington for planes and material and finally they were promised 500 modern planes. After they left for the Orient that 500 was cut down to 250, and I am wondering if any have yet been sent. MacArthur, too, is crying for planes and material, but does he get them? R. W. HADDEN.

Poll Tax

The Post carried the results of the Gallup Poll on the question of whether the Southern people favor repeal of the poll tax.

We wish to point out that the result of the poll, which shows a great majority against repeal of the poll tax, has been obtained by polling only that 25 per cent of the voting population who have paid up their poll taxes. We think this does not represent a fair cross-section of the Southern people and creates an entirely erroneous impression.

Draft Of Fathers

If fathers are to be drafted, wouldn't there be some way to classify them in regard to the ability of their wives, as wage earners?

It does seem that fathers whose wives now have positions, should be taken first.

I have a friend with two children who has never worked away from her home, she has no special training, nor could she leave her children and seek employment at a defense industry. I am one of the many Virginia school teachers, and have two school-age children. My adjustment to life, financially, if my husband were drafted, even though it would be difficult, would surely be easier than that of a woman who has no position.

The children who will be neglected are the ones who must be considered. It has been said the children suffer most during a war. It stands to reason that respectable mothers, who are now, and have been, employed, have made arrangements for the care of their children. The type who left babies in locked cars while they worked are a menace to any future civilization.

In conclusion, let us hope the Selective Service people will, in the drafting of fathers, consider first the status of the wife and her ability to provide for her family.

A MOTHER.

"Telling The People"

Your editorial, "Telling the People," is well taken.

American democracy cannot function intelligently and effectively unless its people are told the truth—good, bad and gruesome. Give them that useful tool, as your editorial pointed out so convincingly, you will have no need to worry about their letdown. Those who are responsible for disseminating the news should realize this grim fact.

Very often one goes to the movies with the good intentions of getting a pictorial view and the news of the war fronts, but comes out totally disappointed because very little news is shown. The one or two shots he sees are generally inconsequential and flavored in such a fashion that one would think our soldiers have gone picnicking in distant lands.

It is true, the realities of war are not always pleasant to read, witness or hear, but who wants sugar-coated news.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Miracle Ship

(London: A new Flying Fortress has been made from one which had its nose shot away and from another that lost its tail.—News item.)

The Flying "Half-and-Halfer"—
Take note of me, my son;
Two ships that got the business,
Now welded into one!

My front was blitzed o'er Holland—
My rear o'er Germany;
But what was left they somehow
Made into what is me.

Two Fortresses we once were—
Each failed to get the breaks—
But even in disaster
All parts had what it takes.

Two badly battered bombers,
We got back to our base —
One ship had lost its whatziss;
The other one its face.

But boy we've got mechanics—
They're fancy guys and deft;
They merely operated
And merged what they had left.

They took one bomber's front end—
They took the other's rear
And welded 'em together—
As one we now appear.

Two ships that should be finished,
Sunk, counted out and done,
Behold us still in action
The Flying "Two-In-One."

Most planes have one heart beating,
But I've the hearts of two;
Two spirits to direct me
In all the tasks I do.

Two warplanes over Europe—
With but one tail and head . . .
A pair of mighty bombers
Arisen from the dead!

The junk pile should have had us—
We might be rusting there,
But still we go to battle—
A merged and blended pair!

Oh, what's a nose or bottom?
There's but one vital part
In planes as in a pilot—
And that, my son's, the heart!

"Counsel for the New York office of OPA has sent letters to nearly 300 restaurants warning them that they must post prices at April levels."—News item.

As if anybody to speak of was paying any attention to the ruling! We have yet to find a restaurant which seemed to have heard anything about it. And this is one matter in which the public cannot be counted on for support. If there is a spot where the average man is docile, yielding and without courage it is at the point where he is expected to make a squawk in a public dining room.

Lost Laundry

Your recent editorials have been admirable in calling attention to the food and restaurant troubles of the people of Washington. Will you now raise your voice in aid of those forced to use the laundries of your city? Residents and visitors are not generally complaining of the high prices charged for laundering. A man who needs clean linen cannot worry about ceiling prices, if any. He must worry, however, if a laundry continually loses his belongings and gives him no recourse but to the courts.

I believe an investigation of the number of claims for lost laundry would prove beyond doubt the need of some immediate protection for those who are unfortunate enough to have to suffer the discourtesy and indifference of employer and employe charged with the simple duty of returning upon payment therefor the same clothes left to be laundered. One does not appreciate receiving another's shirts or shorts. Neither can one wear a money claim. A person may be indicted if he mishandles your investments. Who in Washington protects the public from laundries manhandling vestments? It is unfortunate that the sentiment "this is Washington" seems to condone so many inexcusable inconveniences and costly financial losses.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Quebec And The Russians

THE JOINT statement at Quebec, if we read it carefully, makes clear the real shape of things among the four great powers of our alliance.

LIPPMANN

Britain and America are at war in Europe and in Asia. Russia is at war only in Europe. China is at war only in Asia. Therefore "military discussions" in regard to "the war against Japan" required the participation of Mr. T. V. Soong, particularly because an important part of that war must be mounted on Chinese soil. But Stalin could not have participated in these discussions. It would obviously have been desirable if he had participated in the discussions about the European war. But it was not essential. For the Russian forces and our own fight in separate theaters under separate commands.

MOREOVER, BRITAIN and America are fighting all over the world, from the Aleutians to the Mediterranean, with combined forces under common command. This makes the British-American connection more than an ordinary alliance. It is an intricate partnership, and this means that British and American authorities must be in continual consultation.

It means also, since war diplomacy and military action are two sides of the same shield, that in negotiating agreements about the larger political issues of the war and the armistice and the settlement, Britain and America must act jointly.

Thus the Quebec statement announces that there will be another British-American conference before the end of this year "in addition to"—let us note the words—"in addition to any tripartite meeting which it may be possible to arrange with Soviet Russia."

IF WE bear in mind this controlling fact that within the four great powers of our alliance, there is a British-American partnership, we shall understand much better the problems which lie ahead. Our grand objective is to organize in the war against our common enemies an enduring association among the United Nations. This association must rest in the end upon the enlightened self-interest of all of them. Otherwise it will not endure. The practical problem, therefore, is to find the common interest of the British-Americans on the one hand and the Russians on the other in Europe and in Eastern Asia.

Such a frank statement of the problem is more useful than any global and sentimental generalization about peace and collective security. For we ought long since have learned from our experiences with Soviet Russia the clew to the Russian mystery; it is that we are always very mystified because the rulers of Russia are so exceedingly, and often so rudely, matter-of-fact about Russia's interests.

WE SHALL then begin to see why the fervent pleas that Stalin should meet Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill somewhere have hitherto been unavailing. For the fact is that the great meeting will not be held in order to reach an agreement. It will be held when an agreement is certain. Stalin is not going to negotiate face to face with two English-speaking statesmen who are intimate personal friends. What Stalin has told us, and it makes perfect sense, is that if and when we have reached the basis of an agreement with him, he will then go to a meeting to consummate it and celebrate it. That, we may suppose, is what is implied by the Quebec statement about a meeting "which it may be possible to arrange."

It may be possible to arrange it if through preliminary negotiations the three governments can agree upon the terms of peace for our enemies and upon the frontiers and alliances and transitional governments in Europe as a whole.

THE EUROPEAN continent lies between Soviet Russia and the English-speaking nations.

The great question on which the negotiations will turn is whether Germany, which is the heart of the continent, is to be policed by all the United Nations, or whether Europe is to become an arena of conflict between Russian influence from the East, and British-American influence from the West.

If we can unite in order to restrain Germany, we can unite Europe, and Europe will bind together the Russians and ourselves. If we cannot agree about Germany, then we shall engender a deep dispute as to whether the Russians or the British-Americans are to draw Germany into their orbit. The seeds of that dispute, which can wreck the peace, were sown when we proposed unconditional surrender and AMG for Germany whereas the Russians set up a "free German" committee in Moscow.

THE ERADICATION of that dispute is, therefore, fundamental and, considering the pace of the war, absolutely urgent. It is by no means impossible to do this, provided we abjure wishful and fearful thinking and deal with the Russians realistically. To deal with them realistically is to tailor our politics to our power, making no pretensions where we have not the means to act, standing firm where we have.

For in so far as we have drifted into trouble this last year, it has always been because we misjudged and exaggerated the reach of our permanent influence, and ignored our limitations.

The Gallup Poll

Many in Southern States Dissatisfied on Way Administration Has Handled Negro Problem

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 27.—Although public opinion surveys have failed to reveal any large-scale defection from the Roosevelt Administration on the part of Southern Democratic voters, there is evidence of considerable dissatisfaction among Southerners with its handling of the Negro problem.

The extent of this dissatisfaction was measured recently in a special poll by the Institute throughout the 13 Southern States in which 101 field reporters put this question to a cross-section of Southern white voters:

Do you think the present Administration in Washington has done a good job in dealing with the Negro problem?

Here are the findings:

Believe Administration has done a good job	13%
A fair job	27
A poor job	35
No opinion	25

It will be seen that the number who think the Administration has done a poor job is more than twice as great as the number who think it has done a good job.

An analysis of the reasons given by Southern white voters as to why they feel as they do reveals this significant fact, that the typical Southerner is not opposed to the general aim of improving the status of the Negro. Many more Southern whites want to help the Negro as a race than want to repress him further or even to continue leaving his status unchanged.

What many Southerners do criticize is the means taken by the Administration to improve the status of the colored man.

They feel that large-scale reforms have been undertaken too swiftly, that the improvement of the Negro race must of necessity be a process of gradual social evolution. They tend to criticize the Administration therefore not for its aims, but for its policies in carrying out those aims, and claim that the desire for swift and immediate reforms has made the Negro unruly and unmanageable in many parts of the South.

On the other hand, those Southern whites who think the Administration has done a commendable job with the Negro problem offer few suggestions as to method and place a large amount of emphasis upon what has been accomplished.

Paralysis Outbreak Slackens in Chicago

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP).—Chicago's infantile paralysis outbreak slacked off somewhat today, Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the Board of Health, said.

There were 21 new cases reported today, compared with 34 yesterday and 26 Wednesday. One death was reported. Since July 1 there have been 374 victims in Chicago and Cook County, of whom 37 died.

This Hero Is A Cook

Wounded Saving A Man

(This is the tenth of a series of interviews with wounded veterans of this war now convalescing at Walter Reed Hospital.)

By Hanson H. Hathaway

Post Staff Writer

Generals and Richard Harvey, 25, a brown-eyed chap from "a farm in up-State New York, near Auburn," would understand each other.

HARVEY

Harvey, head-wounded military cook, who has followed culinary fortunes of war from Oran in November, last year, to Gela last month, is a sort of unassigned member of the General Staff.

"Us cooks aren't heroes by a long shot," Harvey said, "but generals would look kind of sick if we weren't along behind the boys, throwing slum together and, in general, giving the Armies the pep which makes the plans and strategy of the brass hats finally make sense."

That head wound.

Nothing to It

"There was nothing to that," he protests. "It was outside Gela. The Jerries were doing everything they could to stop us. So," he said, as though this was a clincher for his contention, "they probably assigned a few guns to wipe out the kitchen setups.

"They just about wrecked the finest mess of corned willie I ever put together with their artillery. When the first few shells came over it knocked one of the green KP's out. I was in my foxhole then, but I could see he might get hurt lying there. I just went out and got him. A shell fragment hit me in the head before I could drag him in with me. That was all."

"If the troops don't get fed, all the strategy and detailed thinking that go into campaigns wouldn't mean a thing," Harvey said. "Them guys got to eat if they're going to keep fighting."

Egg Beater's View

Richard, who modestly qualifies as a hero, as you will see, has had only an egg beater's view of this war. His was a campaign of pots and pans. His victories were worked out with gas fed stoves, whose burners required cleaning every hour because, he said, "some of them generals forgot to figure the stoves were made to use white and not red gas."

His campaign of action saw battles to keep troops fed while water supplies were often destroyed by enemy guns, when food trucks were bombed and artillery threw shells to explode and shower dirt into steaming cauldrons of stew and pans of beans, of harrowing shifts of kitchen locations as enemy resistance and attacks made chosen sites untenable.

Harvey admits a cook hardly ever looks like a hero, but, as he says, it's all in the point of view.

"When the drivers of food trucks came rolling back and one of them says, 'Boy! Did those guys go for that slum-gullion.' I'd always get the feeling that the Germans and the Eyties would get hell after the food settled."

Kitchen Demolition Corps

Harvey humorously and ironically observed that there can be no human and sensible war waging until the rules of warfare are amended. They should, he said, include field kitchens among the objects, organizations and areas now protected by virtue of their work and character.

"Why, hell," he burst out, "if the generals want a smart way to finish a war quick, they should organize a sizable unit for back-line operations.

"Call it the Kitchen Demolition Corps," he chuckled. "The war would end quick because then there would be no answer to that wolf howl—'When do we eat?'"

CHAPTER XXIV

Moscow Dateline

By Henry C. Cassidy

Stalin Writes to 'Gospodin' Cassidy

Stalin was never known for loquacity. The fact of the matter, a phrase he often used when he did consent to speak, was that he very seldom spoke, and then only for a definite purpose. Likewise, he very seldom wrote. The fact of this matter was that he irritated ambassadors and ministers endlessly by ignoring their notes and letters.

So I was exceedingly surprised to receive a short letter from him. I was not at all surprised, after reading its 149 Russian words, counting salutation, signature, and date, to have it become an international sensation.

HENRY C. CASSIDY

It happened this way:

Stalin had just received Churchill. Stalin had just received Willkie. My New York office conceived the idea that it was time Stalin received Cassidy.

So New York telegraphed:

Cassidy view Willkies statement try utmost get Stalin interview or failing that submit written questions second front Allied aid Soviet ability resist etcetera Associated.

That telegram was sent September 28. It annoyed me. I had made many requests to Stalin for an interview or statement, during my two years in Moscow. I had written a beautiful letter, on the previous June 4, telling Stalin I had just been out to see American tanks and planes going into service on the Russian front, and suggesting that a declaration by him on American aid would be most welcome. I had had no answer. Now, New York had suddenly thought up the same idea. I stuffed the telegram into my pocket and forgot about it.

A few days later, while returning from the morning's work at the foreign commissariat to the Hotel Metropole for lunch, I remembered the telegram. There were 10 minutes before the dining room opened at 2 p. m., so I sat down at the typewriter in our hotel room and punched out a letter.

I gave the original of the letter to George Green, our young afternoon secretary, and asked him to drop it sometime at the mail receiving room in the southwest gate of the Kremlin. I put a carbon copy, with New York's telegram' in the files at our apartment, under the heading, "Miscellaneous correspondence."

At 11:45 p. m. the next night, I was just engaging in my nightly debate with myself on the proposition, should I go to bed now or read awhile longer, when the telephone rang. It was a girl secretary of the foreign commissariat press department, who said: "Mr. Palgunov asks you to come to the Narkomindiel immediately. It is very important."

'All right," I said, in pained resignation," I'll come. But it will take me 45 minutes to walk there."

When I reached the press office, the girl secretary dashed out of her cubbyhole to identify me, ducked back into Palgunov's sanctum to announce me, and escorted me into the presence. Palgunov was standing behind his enormous desk, his eyes bulging farther than ever. He emerged to the center of the room, shook hands, waved me into one leather armchair in front of the desk and sat himself in another.

He squinted at me through his thick glasses, and, with an expression that might have been either suspicion, or awe, or both, said:

The document that you are waiting for is here."

What document?" I was tempted to say, but by then I knew. For Palgunov reached over to his desk, picked up a paper, and handed it to me. Across the bottom of it, in violet ink, was the clear, bold, unmistakable signature, J. Stalin. With it he handed me an authorized English translation of the letter. It said:

Dear Mr. Cassidy:

Owing to pressure of work and consequent inability to grant you an interview, I shall confine myself to a brief written answer to your questions.

1. "What place does the possibility of a second front occupy in Soviet estimates of the current situation?"

Answer: A very important, one might say, a prime place.

2. "To what extent is Allied aid to the Soviet effective and what could be done to amplify and improve this aid?

Answer: As compared with the aid which the Soviet Union is giving to the Allies by drawing upon itself the main forces of the German Fascist armies, the aid of the Allies to the Soviet Union has so far been little effective. In order to amplify and improve this aid, only one thing is required: The full and prompt fulfillment by the Allies of their obligations.

3. "What remains the Soviet capacity for resistance?"

Answer: I think that the Soviet capacity of resisting the German brigands is in strength not less, if not greater, than the capacity of Fascist Germany or of any other aggressive power to secure for it world domination.

With respect,

(Signed) J. STALIN.

October 3, 1942.

The original letter in Russian was on paper so plain that it was startling. It was pure white, with no watermark, no heading, nothing to indicate its origin except the signature. It started out bluntly, not "Dear Mr. Cassidy," as the translation put it, but "Gospodin Cassidy!" or "Mister Cassidy!" The text was typed in Russian characters. It was an unusual document.

Congratulations Pour In

All this I took in, while Palgunov stared at me and probably wondered how it had happened. I did not tell him.

"This is very nice," I said. "This gives me great pleasure," which was a masterpiece of understatement. We shook hands and I left hurriedly.

The letter appeared the next morning at the top of page 1 of Pravda, above the Soviet Informburo communique, with an enormous heading; "Replies of Comrade J. V. Stalin to the questions of the correspondent of the American agency Associated Press." Telegrams started to arrive: From Kent Cooper, general manager of the AP, who does not often hand out bouquets, "Congratulations grand achievement getting Stalin letter which published world wide;" and from many others.

Admiral Standley held a press conference Tuesday evening and announced he was taking off Thursday for Washington to confer with President Roosevelt. The Ambassador issued a carefully worded statement that he was going home to talk over "ways and means of coordinating to the utmost the war efforts of the United States and the Soviet Union." Talking to us, he made plain he was flying the Atlantic at the age of 70 because "somebody has dropped a monkey-wrench in the machinery somewhere." That was part of it, although the main reason for his trip was an outgrowth of Willkie's visit.

Foreign Press Quoted

Wednesday's Soviet papers carried foreign press reaction to the letter. Thursday, they reported Churchill had been questioned on it in the House of Commons. Willkie had expressed hope it would receive widespread attention, and Sumner Welles had commented that military problems should be discussed privately by governments, not publicly by the press and people.

With that I entirely agreed. Of all people to be involved in the second-front controversy, I was among the strangest who could have been selected. As correspondent for the A.P., it was my job to report facts objectively and impartially. That, I did. If a Soviet authority made a pronouncement on the second front, I reported it. But I engaged in no campaign of my own.

To the Russians, however, I became something of a celebrity, not only as the man to whom Stalin had written a letter, but as the correspondent who had dared to raise his voice in favor of the second front. The store for foreigners, which had been limiting sales of wine to a single bottle, heaped four in the arms of my maid. My automobile arrived from Kuibyshev in two days on a flatcar, hitched to the fastest passenger train in the Soviet Union. Russian friends telephoned to congratulate me, although one, a bareback rider at the state circus, couldn't understand why I should ask Stalin about the Soviet power of resistance, when everyone knew how strong it was.

A few days later a new English correspondent was stopping me in the hotel corridor, and asking: "I say, old boy, when one corresponds with Stalin, how does one deliver the letter?" And I was trying to think of a new letter myself.

Algiers Now Riot Of Color

City Really Fantastic

By John Steinbeck

Copyright, 1943, New York Tribune, Inc.

Algiers (via London).—Algiers is a fantastic city now. Always a place of strange mixtures, it has been brought to a nightmarish mess by the influx of British and American troops and their equipment. Now jeep and staff cars nudge their way among camels and horse-drawn cars. The sunshine is blindingly white on the white city, and when there is no breeze from the sea the heat is intense.

The roads are lined with open wagons loaded high with fresh-picked grapes, with military convoys, with Arabs on horseback, with Canadians, Americans, Free French native troops in tall red hats. The uniforms are of all colors and all combinations of colors. Many of the French colonial troops have been issued American uniforms since they had none of their own. You never know when you approach American khaki that it will not clothe an Arab or a Senegalese.

Language Is a Mixture

The languages spoken in the streets are fascinating. Rarely is one whole conversation carried out in just one language. Our troops do not let language difficulties stand in their way. Thus you may see a soldier speaking in broad Georgia accents conversing with a Foreign Legionnaire and a burnoosed Arab. He speaks cracker, with a sour French word thrown in here and there, but his actual speech is with his hands. He acts out his conversation in detail.

His friends listen and watch and they answer him in Arabic or French and pantomime their meaning, and oddly enough they all understand one another. The spoken language is merely the tonal background to a fine bit of acting. Out of it comes a manual pidgin that is becoming formalized. The gesture for a drink is standard. Gestures of friendship and anger and love have also become standard.

The money is a definite problem. A franc is worth two cents. It is paper money and comes in five, ten, twenty, fifty, one hundred and one thousand franc notes. The paper used is a kind of blotting paper that wads up and tears easily.

Money Wet and Gummy

Carried in the pocket, it becomes wet and gummy with perspiration, and when taken out of the pocket often falls to pieces in your hands. In some stores they will not accept torn money, which limits the soldier, because most of the money he has is not only torn but wadded and used until the numbers on it are almost unrecognizable. A wad of money feels like a handful of warm wilted lettuce. In addition there are many American bills, the so-called invasion money, which is distinguished from home money by having a gold seal printed on its face. These bills feel cool and permanent compared with the Algerian money.

A whole new tourist traffic has set up here. A soldier may buy baskets, bad rugs, fans, paintings on cloth, just as he can at Coney Island. Many G. I's with a magpie instinct will never be able to go home, such is their collection of loot. They have bits of battle debris, knives, pistols, bits of shell fragments, helmets, in addition to their colored baskets and rugs. In each case the collector has some one at home in mind when he makes the purchases. Grandma would love this Algerian shawl and this Italian bayonet is just the thing to go over Uncle Charley's fireplace, along with the French bayonet he brought home from the last war. Suddenly there will come the order to march with light combat equipment, and the little masses of collections will have to be left with instructions to forward that will never be carried out. Americans are great collectors. The next station will start the same thing all over again.

Hotel Terraces Crowded

The terraces of the hotels are crowded at 5 o'clock. This is the time when people gather to get a drink and to look at one another. There is no hard liquor. Cooled wine and lemonade and orange wine are the standard drinks. There is some beer made of peanuts, which does have a definite peanut flavor. The wine is good and light and cooling, a little bit of a shock to a palate used to bourbon whisky, but acceptable.

On these terraces the soldiers come to sit about little tables and to meet dates. The French women here have done remarkably well. Their shoes have thick wooden soles, but are attractive, and the few clothes they have are clean and well kept. Since there is little material for dyeing the hair or bleaching it, a new fashion seems to have started. One lock of the hair is bleached and combed back over the unbleached part. It has a strange and not unattractive effect.

About 5 o'clock the streets are invaded by little black Wog boys with bundles of newspapers. They shriek, "Stahs 'n Straipes, Stahs 'n Straipes." The Army newspaper is out again. This is the only news most of our men get. In fact, little news comes here. New York and London are much better informed than this station, which is fairly close to action. But it seems to be generally true that the closer to action you get, the the more your interest in the overall picture diminishes.

Local Problems Uppermost

Soldiers here are not so much interested in the trend of war as the soldiers are in training camps at home. Here the qualities of the mess, the animosities with the sergeant, the price of wine are much more important than the world at war.

This is a mad, bright, dream-like place. It is probable that our soldiers will remember it as a whirl of color and a polyglot babble. The heat makes your head a little vague, so that impressions run together and blot one another up. Outlines are hazy. It will be a curious memory when the soldiers try to sort it out to tell about after the war, and it will not be strange if they improvise a bit.

Simplifying Tax Laws

A Communication

In your editorial, "Simplify Taxes" in The Post of July 29, 1943, you discussed the need for simplications of the Federal income tax structure, with particular reference to certain criticisms of the pay-as-you-go system made by Professor Harley L. Lutz in the July 1943 issue of the Tax Review.

The Treasury is vitally interested in simplifying our tax laws and has recently arranged for a special study of this subject under the direction of John M. Maguire of the Harvard Law School. Suggestions for simplification will be welcome, and those made by Professor Lutz are already being given serious consideration.

However, I fear that two of Professor Lutz's predictions, high-lighted by your editorial, may have caused readers undue apprehension. He predicts (1) that disillusionment will result because "very few taxpayers will find themselves fully paid up by the end of this year," and (2) that there will be widespread resentment on the part of taxpayers against "needless confusion and red tape." These predictions are, of course, a matter of opinion; certainly Professor Lutz and everyone else hopes they will prove erroneous. No such unfortunate reaction will develop, we believe, if the taxpayers understand their obligations, for the structure of the pay-as-you-go system itself gives no grounds for disillusion or resentment in terms of what it was planned to accomplish. As a step in keeping taxpayers fully informed, we take this occasion to review the essential characteristics of the pay-as-you-go system.

Current Tax Act

The Current Tax Payment Act of 1943 provides a method of current tax payment for all resident individuals liable to the income or Victory taxes. Thirty-six million will be made fully current by withholding; seven million by quarterly payments, and the remaining eight million by a combination of the two. When I say "fully current" I mean that except for inevitable year-end adjustments, taxpayers generally will be paying their taxes as they receive the income to which those taxes apply.

Any failure to become fully current immediately arises, not from the current payment methods, but from the difficulties of the transition period. To avoid onerous doubling-up of payments during the change-over from the old to the new system, the act cancels 75 per cent of the smaller of the 1942 and 1943 taxes (or 100 per cent if that figure is less than $50 with a gradual lowering of the percentage to 75 per cent at $66.66), and permits taxpayers to pay the uncancelled 25 per cent in two installment, March, 1944, and March, 1945.

Because this 25 per cent remains to be paid, and because the new system was introduced in midyear, there will be some delay in arriving at the fully current basis provided in the 1943 Act. Perhaps it will be helpful to indicate what groups will be current at the end of this year and what groups face a delay in getting on a fully current basis.

The uncancelled 25 per cent, which 27 million out of 51 million taxpayers for 1943 will still owe at the end of this year, is the major noncurrent item. In view of the widespread publicity given to the action of Congress requiring this payment, it seems wholly unrealistic to say that these taxpayers now believe themselves to be "automatically . . . current" and that the carry-over payments will come as severe shocks."

Rise in Wages

However, because the current payment system started in mid-year, there is another group of taxpayers who will have substantial year-end payments to make in March 1944, entirely apart from payments of the uncancelled 25 per cent. This group is composed of persons who have experienced a sharp rise in wages or salaries from 1942 to 1943, but who will not be required to file declarations of estimated taxes in September.

Declarations will be required only of (1) persons with wages in 1942 or 1943 exceeding $2700 if single, or $3500 if married; (2) persons whose income not subject to withholding is more than $100 and whose gross income requires them to file returns; and (3) taxpayers whose wage income in 1943 is less than in 1942. Persons filing declarations in September can become current (except for the uncancelled 25 per cent) by means of their quarterly payments of 1943 tax in September and December. But among the remaining taxpayers, there are some whose 1943 wage or salary incomes have risen sharply (within the $2700 or $3500 limits); since their March and June installments, if any, were based on last year's smaller income, their 1943 taxes will not be fully paid up at the end of this year. Withholding from July through December will not make up for the underpayment in the first six months of the year. Therefore, an additional payment will have to be made in March 1944.

In the process of change-over will be a small group not immediately current with respect to their 1943 tax and a larger group having the uncancelled 25 per cent of one year's tax to pay in 1944 and 1945. Once the transition period is completed, however, all 51 million taxpayers will be current. As was previously pointed out, current payment does not necessarily mean the exact liquidation of tax liability during the year.

Withholding Tax

How closely will withholding approximate the actual tax due? The withholding rate of 20 per cent of the gross wage in excess of the withholding exemption consists of 3 per cent for the Victory tax and 17 per cent for the regular income tax. Clearly this rate is lower than the first surtax bracket rate of 13 per cent plus the normal tax rate of 6 per cent plus the Victory tax rate of 5 per cent. It has to be lower than the sum of these three in order to allow for (1) taxpayer deductions for contributions, interest payments, taxes, medical expenses, etc. and (2) credits provided under the Victory tax. For some taxpayers the amounts allowed in determining the withholding rate will prove to be too liberal; for others, not liberal enough. This will be one source of slight over-withholding or underwithholding of the tax actually due. Periods of unemployment will also cause some overwithholding. Finally, the use of wage brackets in the simplified withholding tables will require some year-end adjustments.

Liabilities not collected at source will be estimated by taxpayers each March, subject to revision each succeeding quarter. The privilege of quarterly revision means that the 15 million taxpayers using this method will be given every opportunity to keep current.

In general, therefore, the adjustments required at the end of the year will be so small that it is fair to say that the Current Tax Payment Act of 1943 will, once the transition period is past, put virtually all individual income taxpayers on a fully current basis.

In his assertions regarding the complications of the present tax laws, Professor Lutz has played up the difficulties inherent in the change-over to a pay-as-you-go method of collecting taxes. Most of these difficulties will disappear once we have accomplished this transition.

In regard to the permanent features of the tax structure, special attention is being given to the simplification of filing procedure and to the proposal that year-end returns be eliminated entirely for certain classes of taxpayers. Of course, Form 1040A already provides a simple means of year-end filing for millions of taxpayers. Granted that further simplification is necessary, it must be kept in mind that the filing of annual taxpayer returns and the cross-check of such returns against employers' reports protect both the Government against underpayment of taxes and the taxpayer against possible overpayment. In simplifying tax procedure we should be careful not to undermine such protection.

AMERICA'S HOME FRONT
Agnes E. Meyer

Enthusiastically praised by "Time"—quoted by "Reader's Digest"—the 29 articles which Agnes E. Meyer wrote for The Washington Post on "America's Home Front" are a brilliant piece of reporting. Now these articles have been reprinted in a 192-page book. They deal with such subjects as social experiments in war industries, problems of food, sanitation, schools, and venereal disease control in boom cities. "America's Home Front" is well worth your reading and keeping.

In Norway

Nazis Order Clergy to Labor Camps

Having failed to break the opposition of Norway's clergy to the Quisling regime by depriving them of office, the "Ministry for Church Affairs" in the puppet government has told the labor office to mobilize for forced labor all clergymen no longer holding office.

Clergymen who have not been deprived of office, but who are considered disloyal to Quisling authorities, are also liable to conscription for slave labor. Membership in the Provisional Church Council is considered "disloyal" to Quisling authorities.

Altogether 798 Norwegian clergymen have refused to have anything to do with the regime, and of the 64 ordained clergy still retaining office only 20 are Nazis, the remainder maintaining a "neutral" attitude.

Measures have been taken to suppress religion inside the notorious Grini concentration camp near Oslo, to which two leading members of the Provisional Church Council, Prof. Ole Hallesby and Pastor Ludwig Hope, were sent a few months ago for protesting against slave labor.

Prisoners are not allowed to possess Bibles, hymnbooks or other religious literature, and to enforce this order German soldiers recently searched Norwegian prisoners, burning all Bibles, hymnbooks and other "illegal" possessions that they seized. The chapel of the concentration camp is used by the Germans for drinking parties.

Race Relations Series to Continue

Several thousand worshipers are expected at Griffith Stadium tomorrow at 8:30 p. m., when Elder Solomon Lightfoot Michaux conducts the second in his series of services designed to promote better race relations.

Spiritual Plan Of Women Seen As Important

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post Church Editor

One of the most important local religious developments this week was the decision of women denominational workers to unite their spiritual ministry to women war workers, especially those in duration residence halls.

During a meeting of the Federation of Churches' Defense Commission, a definite policy was adopted regarding cooperation between the denominational workers and the commission.

The policy calls for the workers to coordinate their efforts through the commission, and form a working committee of full-time denominational workers, with all recommendations of the committee subject to approval of their respective denominations and the Federation's executive committee.

On the working committee at present are Norma Arneson, representing the Committee on American Missions under the National Lutheran Council; Marian Taylor, of the Evangelical and Reformed body, and Evelyn Mills, Northern and Southern Baptist Convention. Other full-time denominational workers are invited to join.

When Government permission is obtained, the workers hope to link residence hall women with churches of their faith; offer opportunity for religious counselling, and provide religious services, a religious library and religious study groups in the halls.

Post Prints Remainder of Soldier's Poem

"A Soldier's Prayer," a poem written by Lieut. Ronald Heaston Kaufman of Mount Rainier, was published in last Saturday's religious page, but a portion was inadvertently omitted. The part, entitled "The Answer" is reprinted below:

Look up to me, my weary son,
Incline to me thine ear.
There's all too much that must be done
For you to nourish fear.

You have said well that force is wrong
And love surpasses hate,
But in this task you must be strong,
Lest it design your fate.

Your Saviour showed the righteous course
To triumph over sin,
But in the temple He used force
To cleanse it from within.

Now you must fight with all your might
Though paradoxical it seems,
To turn the world from wrong to right,
To cleanse it from the tyrant's dreams.

And as you fight and work and pray,
Keep love within your soul,
For you must walk the Master's Way
If you would reach your goal.

Take courage, then, because you choose
To save your church and friends
You have my help; you cannot lose!
Press on, until it ends!

"I WOULD BE TRUE"
HOWARD ARNOLD WALTER

I would be true, for there are those who trust me;
I would be pure, for there are those who care;
I would be strong, for there is much to suffer;
I would be brave, for there is much to dare.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This youthful message was not written to be a hymn, but a creed-poem, sent straight from the heart of a young man to his mother. It is the philosophy of a courageous son who glories in daring, not for himself alone, but for those who are weak and suffering. It is a personal challenge to youth everywhere.

Central Methodists Study Just Peace

The church school of Central Methodist Church, Arlington, Va., has launched a series of studies emphasizing efforts needed for a just and durable peace.

The local church committee program will be designed to help people realize that, next to winning the war, building now for postwar future is the most important single task; to help every citizen to become informed and take part in moulding decisions affecting the peace and to practice neighborliness to people of all races and nationalities.

After preliminary study of the material of the Methodist Church's Commission on World Peace, a peace committee will be set up in the church, with a study course on the general subject of "For This We Fight," stressing postwar issues.

Among leaders behind the Central Church project are Clark M. Eichelberger, director of the Commission to Study the Organization of Peace and Capt. Claude Hart, superintendent of the church school's adult division.

You Know What:

Every glove being worn in the big leagues with the exception of the first basemen's mitts is illegal. There's an old rule on the books limiting the size of infielders', pitchers' and outfielders' gloves, but the rule has never been enforced because it's a relic of the last century when ball players made the transition from the bare-fist days.

POVICH

The big leagues wink at the old rule, except in the case of first basemen's mitts, because if strictly enforced it would permit the players to wear only a pancake-sized glove, which was the style when bare-fist baseball finally went out.

Judge Landis took action against the first baseman's mitts, though, nearly ten years ago when Hank Greenberg made a travesty of the position by originating a claw-like mitt that had many of the dimensions of a snowshoe. It gave him several added inches of reach and virtually precluded muffing a ball. Other first basemen took it up, and first basing lost its art. The advantages of the big mitt were so palpably unfair, Landis acted.

He laid down a new rule prohibiting the use of any mitt that had a spread of more than 4 inches between the thumb and the forefinger—the webbing, so-called. Nor could the mitt measure more than 10 inches across its longest extremities. The first basemen went back to the old-style mitts.

Harry Latina, the customer's man for the Rawlings Sporting Goods Co., tells us all this. He's known to big league players as the glove doctor. All players of both leagues call upon him when their teams move into St. Louis. When they want their gloves cut down in size, repadded, restitched or otherwise treated, Latina brings up his kit, complete with knives, scalpels and needles, and retailors the gloves to the players' taste.

The glove-doctor knows what the players want. He's an old ball player himself, a winning pitcher in the minors and headed for the big leagues when World War I swept him into the Navy. Latina has designed the most popular first baseman's mitt now in use in organized baseball, it's the George McQuinn model, and the fact that McQuinn is one of the slickest-fielding first basemen ever to play the big leagues does not hurt its popularity.

"McQuinn gets a royalty from the sale of the mitts," says Latina, "and I do, too—I got enough to buy myself a brand new Packard just from one year's royalties. The first basemen liked that big mitt that was ruled out. They liked the added reach it gave them. But we got around that by designing the new mitt with inside finger straps that let them wear it down on the middle of the wrist without fear that the mitt would be knocked off their hands."

Latina relates that the biggest fielders gloves are worn these days by the pitchers, not the infielders or outfielders. "The pitchers like to get 'em big," he says," for two reasons. One of the things the big glove gives them is protection out there on the mound. They're pretty defenseless on those balls that are smacked back into the pitcher's box hard, and their gloves are a pretty good shield."

"But I have had pitchers come to me asking for the biggest glove I can make them, just so long as it doesn't look like a joke. Those are the pitchers who have trouble hiding their delivery and their grip on the ball from the coaches. So they get the big gloves to cover up their grips during the wind-ups. They've learned how to be smart."

The most particular fellow with his gloves, says Latina, is Joe Gordon, of the Yankees. He's finicky about leaving his glove overnight in the dressing room. His last act after every ball game is to take his glove, put a ball inside it, and carefully wrap the whole business up with a stout rubber band. "That's to keep the natural pocket in the glove," says Latina.

Bill Werber used to be Latina's best customer. "I used to sell him a half dozen gloves a year. He always carried that many with him, though he could use only one at a time. There were other players like Bucky Harris who would use a glove almost until it rotted off. The old-timers were like that, but the new players think they need a new glove every couple of months. They're worse than women."

Nats to Use Roberts in Game Tonight

New Shortstop Due To Start Against Macks; Niggeling To Take Mound

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

In the direction of Charlie Roberts, who is reported to be a considerable young man from Montgomery, Ala., Manager Ossie Bluege is looking for a solution to his infield troubles.

Bluege indicated that Rookie Roberts would be at shortstop tonight in Griffith Stadium when the Nats meet up with the Philadelphia Athletics after 23 days on the road.

The Nats sent out a hurry call for Roberts two days ago when Harlond Clift and Bob Johnson were taken ill in St. Louis and left there to recuperate. In a situation that threatened the Nats' last-ditch chance to overhaul the Yankees or at least make their strongest battle for second place, Clark Griffith dipped into his Southern Association farm team for its best performer.

Rejected $50,000 Bid

The Brooklyn Dodgers offered Washington $50,000 for Roberts earlier in the season, but the bid was rejected.

Roberts comes up as the standout infielder of the Southern Association. He has been whaling the ball for a .323 average this season and has driven in the very respectable total of 83 runs despite the fact he was not with the club at the start of the year. His 23 stolen bases indicate he is no sluggard. He bats right-handed.

Bluege has had Roberts in mind ever since he saw the youth in spring training with the Nats at Maryland University. He reported late, following an attack of mumps, and was in no condition to make a strong bid for a regular job, but the Nats' manager saw enough of him to tab Roberts for future reference.

Not Worried About Fielding

"I'm not worried about his fielding," said Bluege. "He showed me enough in 10 days to demonstrate he can take care of the shortstop job. I'm not surprised he hit .323 in the Southern Association. He swings a bat pretty well."

Roberts is not a big fellow, but there is style in his movements. He is 25 years old, the father of two children, and not very vulnerable to military service. He came to the Nats' Charlotte farm team from Sanford, Fla., in 1940.

Bluege has been operating with a hodge-podge infield in recent games. He is tempted now to restore Gerry Priddy to second base, play Roberts at shortstop, and alternate Sherry Robertson and Alex Kampouris at third base against right and left-handed pitching. George Myatt has been playing second against right-handed pitching.

The Nats returned from their 24-game Western trip with 13 victories and 11 defeats to show for their efforts. They are in a virtual tie for second place, but are 10½ games behind the Yankees with whom they have seven games remaining.

Niggeling to Hurl

For tonight's return to Griffith Stadium, Bluege will unveil Johnny Niggeling as a member of the Washington pitching staff. Bluege is picking his spot for Niggeling, who has been effective against the A's in two jousts hurling a three-hitter and a two-hitter.

Niggeling is earning the label of a hard-luck pitcher, though. The veteran knuckle-baller was beaten in a 2-1 game by the Browns in his first start for the Nats, and in two games this year he has pitched two-hit ball, only to lose.

The Athletics provide the opposition for the Nats in a three-game series, ending with a double-header tomorrow. Connie Mack's club is in the throes of a horrible slump during which it lost 20 in a row and has now been licked 21 times in its last 23 starts.

Stan Spence and George Case return to Griffith Stadium riding the crest of new hitting streaks. Spence, a sensation in the recent series with the Browns, during which he hit six home runs in eight games, batted more than .500 during that series, as did Case.

Reds Defeat Cards Behind Walters, 3-2

Cincinnati, Aug. 27 (AP).—Behind the pitching of Veteran Bucky Walters, the Cincinnati Reds downed the World Champion St. Louis Cardinals 3 to 2 tonight.

Walters gave up two runs and eight of St. Louis' nine hits in the first four innings. Harry Walker was the only Card to get a safety after the fourth. A crowd of 20,283, largest to witness a night game here this season, saw the contest.

Navy in 2d Grid Workout; Line Smooth

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Aug. 27.—For the second time in a week, Coach John E. (Billick) Whelchel's Navy's gridiron squads donned their full football togs today and settled down to blocking and tackling practice.

Although the line is suffering graduation losses, it was working smoothly today with such linemen from last year's squad as Ben Chase, of San Diego, Calif., 195-pound tackle who has been switched to a guard position; George Brown, 193-pound guard also from San Diego, Calif.; hard bucking tackle John Gillooly of Huntington, W. Va., who saw varsity action for the first time last year; and Ed Elliott, 187-pound guard who comes from Greensburg, Pa.

Diminutive Hal Hamberg, 150-pound triple-theater from Lonoke, Ark., was running as fullback today, with Wayne Nelson, 180-pound quarterback of Salem, Oreg., calling the signals in fake spinner and reverses.

Others in the backfield lineups from the 1942 Tar squad included Miller Evans, an end from Vicksburg, Miss.; big and rangy Jack Martin, 210-pound center from Toledo, Ohio; Hillis Hume, 180-pounder who comes from Alliance, Ohio, one of Navy's good runners and kickers, and Bill Crawley, 165-pound triple-threater who hails from LaMesa, Texas.

Although these veterans will form a nucleus for the 1943 Middies, untried in seasonal competition are nearly 50 linesmen and backs, and only the coming weeks will determine what these aspirants can do in the way of carrying the ball, blocking, tackling, or snagging passes.

Browns Obtain Milnar on Waivers

St. Louis, Aug. 27 (AP).—Al Milnar, 29-year-old southpaw hurler of the Cleveland Indians, has been obtained by the St. Louis Browns on waivers and will join them in Detroit next week.

Milnar last year won six games and lost eight and this season has only one triumph and three losses. In 1940 when Luke Sewell, the Browns' manager, was coaching the Indians Milnar won 18 games and lost 10. He slumped the following year when Sewell moved to St. Louis.

Plans for Overseas Baseball Tour Announced by Landis

18-Player Teams Are Proposed, but Many Problems Must Be Worked Out, He Says

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 27.—Plans are being made to send two teams of major league baseball players overseas to entertain men in service after the world series, Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis revealed officially for the first time today, but he added a number of problems remain to be solved.

He and the presidents of the two leagues—Will Harridge of the American and Ford Frick of the National — formally discussed the proposition which has been talked over with the War Department in "off-the-record" parleys for several weeks.

Landis, Frick and Harridge, who form baseball's advisory council, agreed there are many difficulties to be overcome and details to be worked out, but declared further discussions would be carried on with the War Department and with managers, players and baseball officials.

Want Tour to Go

"We are hopeful the thing will go through," an announcement by the three baseball leaders said.

Landis said by that he did not want it construed that baseball was either optimistic or pessimistic over chances for the trip.

He said baseball had no preference as to where the players should be sent, but the council's announcement mentioned England, Africa and "the South Pacific—including Hawaii."

Landis said he would suggest "18 players on each team as a good figure to conjure with. It won't be a 25-man team." He added that baseball would like to have every club represented, and that there had been no talk on how the trip would be financed or what transportation would be used.

"All that's been suggested are two teams, representative of the two leagues—two teams playing each other," Landis pointed out. "That doesn't mean we will necessarily take players who were on the all-star teams."

Will Poll Players

He indicated that the two league presidents would poll their players to find out who is available and anxious to go. If more than 18 in each league are found, it would be up to the manager to decide who goes. He said a method of selecting managers had been considered but that he didn't want to reveal it at this time.

Indians Beat Chisox, 6-2, In Smith Duel

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP)—The Cleveland Indians broke their virtual tie with the Chicago White Sox for third place by beating the Chicagoans 6 to 2, tonight, moving at the same time to within a half game of the idle second-place Washington Senators.

A wild pitch by Edgar Smith, scoring Mickey Rocco, who had singled and advanced on Roy Cullenbine's double, started the Indians on a three-run eighth inning that broke a 2-to-2 deadlock. A pass, Dick Culler's errors and Oris Hockett's single added two runs.

Southpaw Al Smith held the Sox to six hits, including Luke Appling's third homer of the year, for his thirteenth victory. He has beaten Chicago four times.

Browns Edge Tigers, 3-1; Galehouse Wins

St. Louis, Aug. 27 (AP).—Denny Galehouse defeated Al Newhouser tonight, 3 to 1, in a meeting of the St. Louis Browns and Detroit Tigers. Newhouser was relieved in the eighth for a pinch-hitter.

Rudy York, needing four home runs in this four-game series to break his own major league record of 18 in one month set in August, 1939, failed to hit in four attempts, striking out twice.

The Browns scored one run in each of three innings, aided by doubles by George McQuinn and Galehouse. The Tigers' lone run came in the ninth.

Lew Hanbury Scores Kayo Over Coen

'Sugar Ray' Takes Every Round in Winning Easily From 'Hammer'

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Aug. 27.—Henry Armstrong was handed a 10-round beating by Sugar Ray Robinson in Madison Square Garden tonight and immediately afterward announced his retirement.

The only man ever to hold three world championships simultaneously, the game little warrier dropped every one of the 10 heats to Robinson according to the Associated Press score card. Then, realizing that Old Pop Time had run out on him, he announced from the ring that he was hanging up the gloves for keeps.

Scaling 140 to Robinson's 145 pounds, he chased the skinny Harlem Hammer all around the place, but Ray just toyed with him, bouncing backwards, moving from side to side, and piling up points with long left jabs and occasional swinging rights. None of these had Henry in danger of a knockout at any time, but merely served to keep him at a distance while Ray made sure of the victory.

Buzz-Saw Runs Down

Trying from start to finish, but with legs far too ancient to keep step with the "Jumping Jive" of the youngster from uptown, Henry showed throughout that the little buzz-saw had finally run down.

Wisely, he made up his mind that it was time to call it a career. And make no mistake about it—it was a great career. It stretched over a 12-year period through approximately 300 fights. At one time, he ran up a string of 44 straight victories, during which he won the world featherweight championship by whipping Petey Sarron in October, 1937, took the welterweight crown from Barney Ross the following May and captured the lightweight title from Lou Ambers three months later.

He abdicated the featherweight championship voluntarily; lost the lightweight bauble back to Ambers in 1939 and finally was beaten for the welterweight honors by Fritzie Zivic in 1940.

He failed in an attempt to win back the 147-pound crown, and in 1941 decided to quit. But last year, his scarred eyes healed and his weight providing no problem, he started a comeback. Tonight marked the twenty-seventh outing of that comeback campaign—and the fourth loss. But this loss was the crusher and the convincer.

Every one of the 15,371 customers in the house, who contributed to a gross gate of $60,789, knew as well as Henry that he'd about reached the end of the road.

Hanbury Kayoes Coen

Lew Hanbury, young Washington lightweight, made his Garden debut by stopping Gus Levine Coen of New York, in the fifth round of one of the six-round preliminaries. Hanbury, scaling 133½ and Coen's 125¾, dropped the New Yorker for counts of 2 and 3 in the third heat, had his own left eye gashed open in the fourth and then came on to floor Coen twice more for 2 counts in the fifth before Referee George Walsh stopped it at 2:46 of the session.

Riviera Club In Swim Tie

By the Associated Press

Shakamak State Park, Ind., Aug. 27.—Joan Fogle, the pretty 15-year-old "Peck's Bad Girl" of Indianapolis' national championship swimming team, came through in the pinch today to give the Riviera Club a tie with the Multnomah Club of Portland, Oreg., for the 1943 national women's swimming title at the end of the second day.

Joan was the only one of three defending national champions to retain her crown today and she did it in the 300-meter individual medley by only a whisker over Suzanne Zimmerman of Portland. Five yards from the finish it looked as if they were neck and neck, but Joan found some unexpected reserve of strength to finish ahead in 4:35.3.

The first national champion to fall was Miss Zimmerman, who was defeated in the 100-meter free style by her teammate, the beauteous Brenda Helser of Multnomah. Ann Curtis of the Crystal Plunge Pool team was second and Miss Zimmerman third.

After Miss Fogle had successfully defended her title, Jeanne Kessler of the Lake Shore Club won the National Senior Platform Diving title.

The finals of the 1500-meter free style found the defending champion, Nancy Merki of Multnomah, taking the worst beating. First place went to pig-tailed Florence Schmitt of the Women's Swimming Association of New York.

Redskins' Playing Positions Are Not Definitely Settled

Squad Arrives at College Park for Workout; Bergman Studies Scouts' Reports on Material

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

The Redskins took up training quarters at College Park yesterday after more than five weeks on the road but the 27 men who reported to the afternoon workout are not necessarily set on their positions for the season.

Head Coach Dutch Bergman is still on the search for player talent and in the next day or two will scan reports from Redskin scouts scattered throughout the principal football sections of the country for possible additions.

Bergman would like to sign one of his former star ends at Catholic University, big George Mulligan, who has been out of football for five years. Mulligan, an excellent wingman for the Cardinals, is employed in the Government here but if he is in condition Bergman will give him a trial.

Experienced Filler-Inner

Mulligan once filled in as a last-minute replacement in the heavyweight spot on the CU boxing team and, appearing in his first and only bout, knocked out Western Maryland's big heavyweight in the second round.

The Redskins are one under the new player limit at present, with a squad composed of 15 veterans, including Joe Aguirre, absent last year after a brilliant rookie year in 1941; five former members of other pro teams, including Ken Haydn and Jack Smith of the Philadelphia Eagles gained in the Roy Zimmerman trade Thursday, and seven rookies.

University of Maryland Coach Dr. Clarence Spears, who also scouts for the Redskins, took Bergman, Turk Edwards, Trainer Red Johnson and the squad on an inspection tour of the College Park grounds yesterday afternoon preceding a 2:30 workout. The squad arrived in town before noon.

Housing Undecided

Twenty-two squad members, plus Edwards and Johnson, plan to take up quarters in the fraternity house, just off the campus, at least until the first game, October 3. Four Redskins, Bob Masterson, Bob McChesney, Andy Farkas and Bob Seymour, plus Coach Bergman, have homes in Washington, and Clyde Shugart will commute from Baltimore, where he is an official in a large ice cream company. It has not been decided whether the team will remain together or take up separate quarters after the start of the season.

The Redskins will work twice today, as Bergman will start the hard work in preparation for three tough exhibition games with the Bears, Packers and Cardinals, all away from home. Dutch hopes to schedule scrimmages with teams nearby with Maryland an unknown quantity. Navy may be his only hope.

Dayton Shot Wins Grand American

Vandalia, Ohio, Aug. 27.—A home-town boy made good for the second time in the 44-year history of the Grand American Trapshoot today as 35-year-old Jasper Rogers, Dayton toolmaker, captured trapdom's greatest prize, the Grand American Handicap, in a six-way shootoff.

The warplant worker, who has been shooting only four years, and who once finished second in a "hunter's special" for his only former approach to the heights, broke 97 of 100 from 18 yards and then cracked 47 of 50 in a shootoff to take the title after five other had tied him in the regular event.

Paul Wagner, Lima, Ohio, salesman, missed fame and fortune after having it in his grasp. He dropped the last two targets of the shootoff to finish one behind Rogers after leading to that point.

"Skipper" Winski, 17-year-old Wellsburg, W. Va., high school coed outshot about 40 women to take the feminine grand with 90 of 100 from 17 yards. She won the preliminary handicap yesterday with the same score—the first woman to take the two titles the same year.

Georgia Rangers Baffled At Private 'Pond Cutting'

By the Associated Press

Swainsboro, Ga., Aug. 27.—Hundreds of fishermen had a field day, netting some 15,000 pounds of fish from a private pond while 40 Wildlife Rangers were held in check by a court order restraining their interference.

The wholesale descent on a 500-acre pond near here took place yesterday. In Atlanta, Charles N. Elliott, director of Georgia's Game and Fish Commission, said it couldn't happen again because Attorney General T. Grady Head had ruled that anyone taking fish from a private pond with exception of the owner must obtain a fishing license.

Private Ponds Exempted

Elliott said his Rangers were restrained by a court order based on the claim that the last Legislature amended the game and fish law to exempt private ponds from jurisdiction of the Game and Fish Commission.

The local "pond cutting" was advertised for several days in handbills. The pond was sold out for the day by E. L. Smith, owner, to Mayor Ted R. Spivey of Swainsboro and R. Roger Dekle, gasoline distributor, who had the draining done and sold tickets.

Elliott estimated the crowd at between 4000 and 5000 and said he figured they removed around 15,000 pounds of fish. Some 40 Rangers had been ordered to the scene before the court order was obtained.

Few Possessed Licenses

Smith said he doubted that more than 100 of the 700 or more who waded into the water possessed fishing licenses although an effort was made to cooperate with the commission by announcing over a public address system that it was advisable to have one.

Many of the fishermen were reported to have sold their catches for $30 or more. Some of the fish weighed 15 pounds, with a large proportion more than 2 pounds.

Brewers Win, 14-10; Stay in Series

Commanders Defeated by 20-Hit Attack

The Heurich Brewers got back in the thick of the battle for the city amateur baseball yesterday when they defeated the C. A. (A.A.), Potomac Command League champions, 14-10, on the Ellipse diamond. The victory was the second for the Beerman against two losses. Three defeats eliminates a club.

In contrast to pitchers' battles that have marked most of the city-wide play-off, series, yesterday's fray was a wild-and-woolly affair with the Brewers making 20 hits to their rival's 15. Reds Giegerich had a perfect day with 5 for 5. Peco Barry got 4 for 5 and Joe Acquilino had 3 for 5. Temecko and Huff obtained three hits each for the Commanders

The series will be resumed Monday with the Commanders playing Headquarters Marines. The winner of this game meets Heurich's on Tuesday.

Costantino To Work Out Here Today

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

Lulu Costantino, 21-year-old New York Italian who recently carved out a victory over the veteran, Chalky Wright, will unveil his flashing fists for the first time in Washington at 2 p. m. today when he goes through a public workout at Turner's Arena as a final bit of preparation for his important 10-round bout with Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson at Griffith Stadium Monday night.

Costantino arrived late last night and immediately dropped by the sports department to reveal his name was spelled C-o-s-t-a-n-t-i-n-o and not C-o-n-s-t-a-n-t-i-n-o as everyone, including the wire services, have been spelling it ever since he put on the gloves. His manager, Charley Johnson, accompanied him.)

The Lulu, conqueror of three former featherweight champions but never able to get a champ in the ring with him with the title on the line, yesterday went before the New York State Athletic Commission and demanded recognition as the top-ranking challenger for the featherweight title now held, in New York's eyes, by Willie Pep. The Commission, however, refused the demand, ruling Pep's title frozen for the duration. Lulu's manager, Charley Johnson, is also hot on the trail of a bout with Phil Terranova, who only recently kayoed Jackie Callura for the NBA crown.

Wilson Also Sees 'Chance

Jackie Wilson, also on the upgrade with his broken arm entirely behind him, senses a chance to once more earn a direct shot at his lost feather-title by a victory over The Lulu. Wilson's business representative, Jack "Reverend" Laken, is also burning a few wires trying to get Terranova to climb into the ring with Jackie with the title at stake and has already been assured of a fat guarantee by Promoter Joe Turner to stage the bout here, next month, if possible.

Wilson, who works out in his final hard drill today at 1 p. m., an hour before Costantino dons the mittens, worked the equivalent of 10 rounds yesterday, including four fast rounds of boxing with Johnny Cockfield, hard hitting New York Negro. Tomorrow both boys will indulge only in limbering up exercises.

Latsios, Starr Bout Interesting

Interest in the eight-round semi-final, involving Maxie Starr, Aberdeen Proving Ground soldier, and Nick Latsios, Army Air Corps private, took on added momentum yesterday when Promoter Turner revealed he had a chance to bring Beau Jack back here next month and was beginning a search for a worthy opponent, with Latsios, who boasts nine straight pro victories without defeat, a leading candidate. Once before Turner all but closed for a Beau Jack-Latsios match which fell through when The Beau could not make the date Turner desired.

Attorneys Favor $300 Grocer Fine

health violations must be prosecuted under an "obsolete" 1871 regulation with a maximum penalty of only $25. However, Congress on December 16, 1941, passed the Unwholesome Food Act, with a maximum penalty of a straight jail sentence of 90 days or an alternative fine of $300, and in lieu of that a year in jail.

This was partially revoked, he said, by an ordinance of April 21, 1942, entitled "Regulations as to Restaurants, Delicatessens and Caterers." This regulation exempted grocery stores from paying the $300 fine or serving the straight jail sentence.

Thomas said that in his opinion and from his study this ordinance enacted by the District of Columbia government needlessly restricted a Congressional Act by (1) exempting groceries from its provisions and (2) eliminating the straight jail sentence of 90 days.

Keech, said, "I am in entire sympathy with Thomas' views. Immediately upon receipt of his report I will transmit it to the regulations committee who after acting on it will send it to the Commissioners."

Others Penalized

Gaghardin was one of those who were ordered by Judge John P. McMahon to appear in court after he had on August 10 failed to appear and had forfeited $25 collateral on the charge. A second charge, that of keeping decomposed meaks in a refrigerator was dropped on the ground that it might be a duplication of the first charge.

Reuben Gordon, grocer of 201 12th st. ne., was fined $25 for having mixed trash and garbage strewn over a rear yard, and evidence of mice in his store, and link sausage unfit for human consumption.

Gee Moon Yook, restaurant of 518 10th st. nw., was fined $15 for having roaches in rice, many flies, dirty meat block and dirty shelves.

Sanford, before the revocation board, was charged with having forfeited $150 on health charges in the last 16 months, and of having at various times a greasy exhaust pipe, greasy wall, dirty slicer, shelves, floors, utensils, stove, toilet, exposed garbage, and flies and roaches.

Sanford, in his defense, contended he was suffering a help shortage and pleaded for another chance. He said improvements had been made. The case was taken under advisement by Chairman John O'Dea.

It is expected the revocation cases will be decided sometime next week.

Capital Transit Net Decreases 20% in July

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Capital Transit Co. yesterday reported net income of $129,623 in July, a decrease of 20 per cent, as compared with $161,752 in the same month last year.

Operating revenues for the month advanced 13 per cent to $2,395,554, but this was offset by a jump of 16.7 per cent in operating expenses, taxes and depreciation. Taxes alone spurted 59.6 per cent to $521,883.

Revenue passengers aggregated 35,736,564, a gain of 16.5 per cent over the 30,667,238 for the same 1942 month.

The war-strained transit system also reported that net income of $961,909 for the first seven months compared with $1,001,891 in the corresponding period last year. Although operating revenues of $16,589,674 were 27.6 per cent improved, this was offset by a 31 per cent increase in operating expenses, taxes and depreciation.

A record number of passengers dropped fares in the box during the first seven months, totaling 246,777,578, as compared with 188,147,813 in the like 1942 period, while the entire district averaged 1 per cent less in sales.

Nationally, the Federal Reserve Board reported that department store sales last week were 15 per cent higher than during the corresponding week a year ago.

Increases were shown for all reporting districts. By percentages they were: Boston 14, New York 6, Philadelphia 2, Cleveland 15, Atlanta 30, Chicago 16, St. Louis 13, Kansas City 27, Dallas 36, and San Francisco 19.

Pennsy's Net Off in July

Pennsylvania Railroad Co. yesterday reported net railway operating income of $10,053,868 in July, a decrease of $5,461,188, as compared with the same month last year. An $11,761,407 increase in taxes for the month, as well as sharply heavier expenses, more than offset an $11,501,889 jump in gross operating revenues.

Net railway operating income of $60,911,031 for the first seven months of 1943 compared with $63,378,160 for the same period last year.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Dayton Double-Checks For Plane Supremacy

Jerry Kluttz now is on tour of various Government installations throughout the Nation, where 92 per cent of the country's Federal employes work. Only 8 per cent of those employed by Uncle Sam are stationed in Washington.

Dayton, Ohio—On battlefields the world over the Army Air Forces are hastening the day of victory. But a group of civilian and military men and women at Wright Field here have made the victories possible by winning the many battles of air science.

This group of scientists, engineers and technicians—the largest concentration on earth—is protector of the airman. Their job is to make flying foolproof and their developments have saved lives of untold thousands and advanced aviation by Paul Bunyan strides.

A slogan heard frequently at the materiel center here is: "Our Air Force crews are not expendable." And the center is our insurance that our military aircraft, equipment, and supplies are of the very best. Its business is to save lives of airmen.

Everyone of the tens of thousands of parts in a plane, everything the flier wears and eats under all possible conditions are subjected to tests and double-checks.

Planes Dropped for Tests

Planes are lifted by cranes and deliberately dropped until they break to detect weak spots . . . 20-mile hikes are made in shoes to test their comfort . . . propellers are tested at such a terrific speed that they fly into bits . . . the performance of engines are tested in tunnels through which wind is blown by giant fans at a speed of 400 miles an hour (a new tunnel is being constructed where wind can be blown up to 600 miles an hour) . . . engines and oil lubrication are tested at 60 below in icy chills from the world's largest refrigerator . . . the glass in goggles is tested for eye comfort . . . and proper diet for airmen under all possible conditions also is under constant research. An Army Medical Corps doctor who showed me around the aeromedical laboratory, had made the world's record parachute jump . . . 40,000 feet . . . only a few days ago to test an oxygen mask. He had frozen a hand during the fall.

Our planes are compared with enemy and Allied planes at the center. Jap, German, Italian and British planes were on the field and the researchers were trying to find what they can do and how they can do it. Enemy equipment also is tested. As a rule German equipment is found to be pretty good; Italian, very bad. About 30 percent of our oxygen equipment has been copied from the Germans and they've copied some of our features, too. In fact, German and American oxygen equipment is interchangeable. The armor on planes and the fire power of cannons and machine guns—Allied and enemy—are under continual study.

Needed Persons Unavailable

These are just a few of the activities of the Materiel Center. The researchers have a short but illustrous record. At Wright Field the parachute was developed, blind solo landings were first made among other accomplishments.

The war, of course, has brought about a multiple expansion at Wright Field. The number of civilians has jumped four times and in the field service the increase has been much greater, from 418 in 1940 to 22,000 today. The many different types of employes needed at Wright are difficult, if not impossible, to hire. To carry on the work several thousand officers and enlisted men have been assigned to the station in recent months.

As long ago as 18 months the Civil Service Commission wasn't able to supply the demand here for scientific personnel—there just weren't any available—but the Materiel Center smashed that bottleneck by arranging for the training of women as engineering aides at West Virginia Wesleyan, University of Southern California and other schools. Additional training courses will be given this fall. Moreover, 5800 employes were trained at the center last year to do everything from typing to inspecting air equipment.

Employe turnover is being licked at the field though there is still plenty of room for improvement. In the past year it has been cut from 8.3 per cent to 4.2 per cent. The private industry average is 7.11 per cent. However, 70 per cent of the employes at the field have been on the job less than a year and just 3 per cent have been working here for 15 years and more.

Sick Leave Problem

Sick leave was a problem last year. It's estimated $140,000 worth of unjustified sick leave was taken. But that has been stopped. Nurses are now sent to the homes of the sick to doctor them, if that's needed, and to report them AWOL, if that's warranted.

Those who try to compare this war with World War I in terms of money and personnel must overlook the Army Air Forces. In World War I the air forces were a branch of the Signal Corps and we had few, if any, American-made planes in actual combat.

In this war Air Forces have contracted 32 billion dollars worth of planes and equipment and that alone is far greater than the cost of World War I. From the Material Center alone each month is paid from 800 million to a billion dollars to contractors.

Among His Souvenirs

Richmond Va. (A.P.).—Budget Director J. H. Bradford had to shout from the third floor of the State Capitol Building to a guard on the grounds for help yesterday when he was locked in a washroom from which a souvenir hunter had taken the brass knob.

Sweet Sioux

Seattle, Wash.—As a part of a war bond sales promotion rally, Chief Yellowlark of the Sioux Indians made Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, daughter of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, an honorary tribesman yesterday, with the name "Contiskuia"—meaning sweetheart.

Boat Owners To Get Gas Ration Sept. 1

Soldiers on Leave Also May Obtain Up to 5 Gallons After That Date

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Soldiers on furlough and non-occupational boat owners again will be permitted to receive special gasoline rations beginning September 1, the Office of Price Administration announced yesterday amidst indications that the pleasure driving ban also will be lifted on that date.

Furlough rations, which were revoked in the Eastern gasoline shortage area June 1, will be made available upon presentation of leave or furlough papers to local ration boards. Up to five gallons of gasoline may be allowed for furlough travel.

Limited rations for nonoccupational boat owners in the East will be restored under an equalization plan extending present general curtailments on boat operations from the East and Midwestern States to the entire area east of the Rocky Mountains.

Rations by Horsepower

Non-occupational boat rations will be based on horsepower. Inboard boats, for example, may obtain rations of two gallons per horsepower up to a maximum of 125 gallons for a three-month period. Outboard boats may get 2½ gallons per horsepower up to 20 gallons for the same period.

These gasoline rations for Eastern boats bring the special allotments to the level of those which have been available to boats in the Middle West and Southwest and which now will be available to boats in all waters East of the Rockies.

Meanwhile, the Petroleum Administration for War disclosed that the armed forces will require an estimated 37.6 per cent of all the gasoline manufactured East of the Rockies during 1944. This compares with 12.5 per cent directed to the armed services in 1942.

Little for Civilians

The administration warned that the expected war drain upon gasoline resources makes it impossible to promise much gasoline for civilians.

Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes has already pointed out that the Middlewest, Southwest and the East are even now consuming more gasoline than has been allotted to those areas. He has warned that continued overconsumption will make it impossible to lift present gasoline restrictions.

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown, however, has indicated that he will lift the pleasure driving ban September 1, as promised, if it is possible. Restoration of special rations to soldiers and boat owners is interpreted as a favorable step toward lifting the ban.

OPA Charged With Unfair Price Practice

The Safeway Stores, Inc., charged in a suit yesterday that the OPA is discriminating against chain stories in setting ceiling prices for the sale of meat and, by its practices, is encouraging customers to patronize high-price stores as well as the black market.

Protesting an OPA regulation which creates a differential between the ceiling prices used in privately owned storer with sales of more than $250,000 a year and chain stories in the same category, Safeway filed suit in the United States Emergency Court of Appeals.

10 Per Cent Leeway

In addition, Safeway contends that under this regulation an individual store belonging to a chain but which has sales of less than $250,000 yearly may charge meat prices 10 per cent higher than those chain stores with sales of more than a quarter-million dollars. Safeway states that, in effect, this regulation illegally forces it to charge different prices in the same trading area.

These ceiling prices pertain to beef, veal, lamb and mutton.

The OPA, the complaint charges, exceeded its legal rights when it failed to consider the Safeway complaint when it was filed with the agency on June 29.

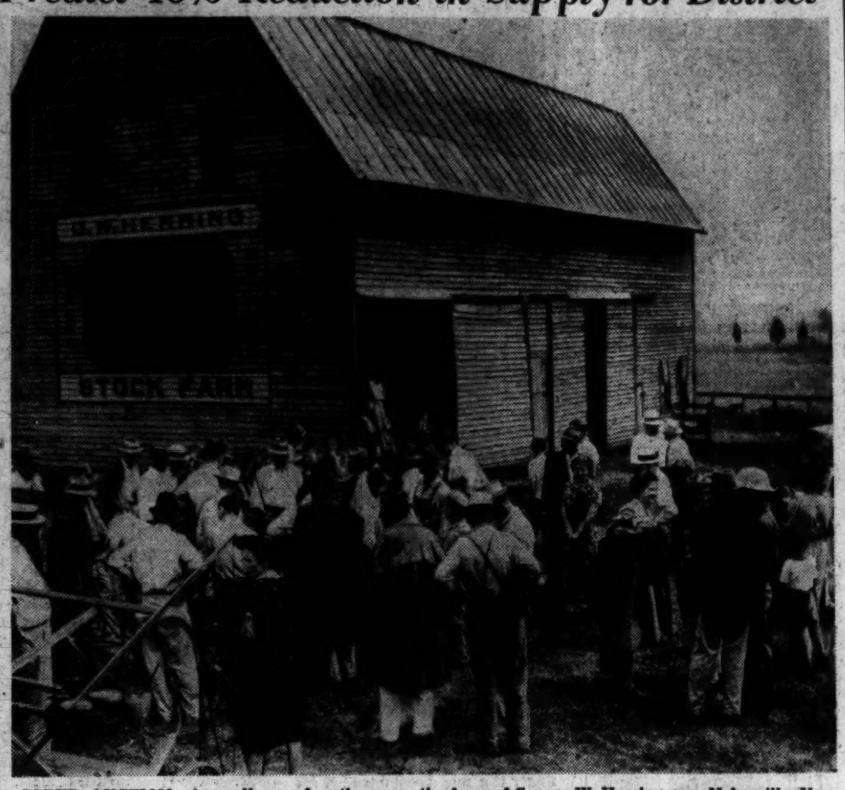
Violation Charged

Further, it is charged that the OPA violates a provision of the price control legislation which forbids OPA from "compelling changes in business practices," in respect to the uniform-price practice of stores in the same trading area.

Not only does the OPA discriminate against the Safeway chain, the suit charges, but it also discriminates against consumers dealing in low-cost stores and encourages, it is said, their going to high-cost establishments and to the black market due to the scarcity of meat.

The suit was filed by Attorneys Elisha Hanson and Eliot C. Lovett.

Dairymen Assail Failure of Federal Aid, Predict 40% Reduction in Supply for District



SOBER AUCTION—A small crowd gathers on the farm of George W. Herring near Nokesville, Va., bidding on farm tools, buckets, rope and other equipment. Like many others in the Washington milkshed, Herring sold out because of the drought.

At auction yesterday of dairy holding of G. W. Herring at Nokesville, Va., attending farmers, many of whom were members of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, spoke bitterly of Government help to their drought stricken areas, and predicted up to 40 per cent drop in the District milk supply this winter.

"Government aid has been inconsequential," one dairyman declared. "Officials do not realize the gravity of the situation faced by us, and its consequences to milk consumers in the Washington area."

Herring, whose farm is one of three owned by his family, said the sale was forced because of labor shortage, drought conditions and his lack of faith in Government aid.

T. B. Flickinger, association member, predicted the drop in milk supply.

"Unless we get feed in right amounts and quickly at prices we can afford to pay, Washington milk intake, now some four million gallons monthly, will be cut 40 per cent," he said.

The association of which Flickinger is a member supplies an estimated 80 per cent of all milk consumed in the District. Nearly all association members and scores of independent dairymen are in their second week of feeding winter reserves.

Presaging local crisis to aggravate conditions faced by Washington, unless Government officials take quick action in this emergency of the milk industry, was the sale Tuesday of the Flory cream and poultry business, principal vendor to the farming center of Manassas.

Flory held also that the poultry industry was threatened through disparities between costs of bringing poultry to market condition.

Meanwhile, continued lack of rain has caused a rapid spread of the Virginia drought area and caused recommendation for participation of 10 more counties—all in the eastern section—in the proposed Federal relief program.

Hebert Favors Ending Divided Authority Over D. C. Water

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana, a member of the House District Committee, disclosed yesterday that he was studying possible legislation to eliminate the divided authority over the District water supply.

Hebert declared that the present arrangement, under which the War Department is in charge of the supply of water and the Water Department in charge only of the distribution, is intolerable.

After several hours conference with Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, chairman of the Commissioners' Committee to study the accounting and billing system of the Water Registrar's Office, Hebert announced he was "satisfied the committee had done a first-rate job."

"I do not think it will serve any good purpose to cover the same ground studied by this committee," Hebert said.

Hebert complimented an editorial in The Washington Post which suggested that his most useful field of service to the Water Department would lie in clearing up the legislative situation permitting a division of control.

Meanwhile it was disclosed by Water Registrar Ralph L. Hebbard that the change over from a flat rate to a meter system was responsible for the previously reported jump in the water bill at 2520 and 2518 F st. nw. to $120 for two years.

This property is owned by Mrs. Mary D. Meehan, 6707 6th st. nw., who recently inherited it. It will be the subject of condemnation proceedings, Assistant Engineer Commissioner Joseph D. Arthur, jr., announced yesterday.

Plans for putting a modern, sanitary low-cost housing project on the site were developed by Mrs. Meehan whose family have owned land here since the District was formed. War time regulations and restrictions have prohibited the owner from carrying out her plans, she said.

Victory Sidelights

Full Staffs of Community And Block Leaders Sought

The first meeting to organize block leaders and community chairmen for participation in the program of the recently formed civilian war services took place yesterday in the District Building with 23 chairmen hearing the outline for the future program from Executive Officer Harry Somerville.

A plea was made to have all civic organizations submit names of prospective workers to bring the number of community chairmen, tentatively set at 66, and the block leaders up to the required strength.

It was announced that block leaders will appoint boys and girls, in teams of two, who will carry messages and distribute information. Those youngsters serving in this capacity must be under the age of 16 and preferably those not affiliated with youth organizations.

Italian Republic Urged

Establishment of a democratic republic in Italy was urged yesterday by Angelica Balabanoff, Italian socialist author who knew Mussolini in his youth and worked with him on "Avanti," a radical paper. She spoke at the Workmen's Circle Hall under the auspices of the Washington Committee for Italian Freedom, described by Ignatius Geraci as a "nonpartisan group."

Forger Suspect Blames Tax Cuts

Judicial notice was taken of the pay-as-you-go tax plan for the first time in Municipal Court yesterday when police said that Jeanette Glenn, 19, Negro, admitted forging a $22 check but only because she considered her pay envelope was too light after the various deductions were taken from it.

Miss Glenn, who resides at 1500 Call pl. se., was held for grand jury action under $1000 bond. Detective Sergt. David Higgins said that Miss Glenn took a blank check from the laundry where she was employed and forged a signature.

Tons of Rubber Flown From South America

Hundreds of tons of wild rubber is being flown monthly from South America to the United States through the efforts of intrepid men who face headhunters, tropical disease and blind flying with equanimity.

KNIGHT

That is the story unfolded yesterday by Capt. Jack Knight, veteran pilot of 19,000 flying hours, who has just returned from six months in South America, where he was in charge of flight personnel for the Rubber Development Corp., a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. Knight declared the United States can get all the rubber it needs from South America if efforts are properly expanded.

A fleet of 12 planes, most of them Catalina flying boats, are used in the pioneer work of locating the rubber fields. Workers and supplies are landed and the planes keep contact with the parties bringing additional supplies and leaving with the precious cargo. As much as six tons of rubber can be transported in one Catalina in addition to fuel and crew, Knight said.

Headquarters at Manaus

Headquarters have been set up deep in the heart of Brazil at Manaus, at the junction of the Rio Nigra and the Amazon.

From here, exploration and work parties fan out by air into the impenetrable jungles of unmapped regions.

No radio setups exist in those wild regions to guide pilots in "on the beam" and navigation is done only by dead reckoning—a method that allows for no mistakes.

So dense is the jungle land that one party, having made a forced landing, toiled, hacked and fought the wilderness for two weeks in order to reach a village 20 miles away, Knight asserted.

The veteran pilot's biggest thrill came with his first acquaintance with headhunters—slight fellows averaging 90 pounds in weight with a fondness for baubles and heads of enemies, which they mummify and use as decoration.

Light Is Handy

Knight, sleeping in his grounded plane, was awakened by a high-pitched babbling.

"I looked up and saw two savage little heads peering down at me from the hatch," Knight said. "They looked something like underdeveloped coconuts. Their babbling grew louder and one made a menacing gesture with a mahogany blowpipe. I knew they shot poison-tipped arrows that killed in 18 seconds. I had no weapon nearby, but I grabbed a flashlight and focused the beam on them. They fled in panic."

His special mission in South America now ended, Knight has accepted the post of senior air carrier inspector with the CAA. He was pioneer air mail pilot flying the Omaha-Chicago route in 1920. He has been an airlines pilot for a number of years, most of them with United Airlines. He is married and at present is living at the Harrington Hotel.

Old Residents Among Those To Leave Hotel

Government purchase of the Capitol Park Hotel for a servicemen and women's center is going to break up one big, happy "family" of residents and employes, some of whom have lived or worked there for as long as 25 years.

A big sign in the hotel lobby yesterday informed guests the Government was taking over, and warned that tenants must vacate by August 31. It was viewed a bit wistfully by some of the old-timers.

Christie Oldest Guest

One of the hotel's oldest and best-known guests is 76-year-old J. Walter Christie, inventor of a flying war tank and one-time holder of the world's auto speed record.

Driving his "Christie Special" on a St. Paul track in the early 1900's he went a mile in 51 seconds. The inventor, now president, designer and main stock holder in the U. S. Flying Artillery Corp., has lived most of the last 25 years at the Capitol Park.

"I've been sick lately," he said yesterday. "Being as we have to move anyhow, I think Mrs. Christie and I will get out in the country somewhere."

Then take Mrs. Lillian Fulden of 3716 26th st. ne. She lacks one month of having worked at the hotel for 25 years. First she was in the restaurant, and for the last 20 years she's been at the cigar counter.

She knows the favorite cigar of many a Washington dignitary. And there's Mrs. Florence Carter, 1219 V st. se., switchboard operator at the hotel for 24 years.

Some Employes to Remain

Some of the employes will be retained, officials of Recreation Services, Inc., which will operate the service center, said last night.

Another old resident at the Capitol Park is Ex-Senator Wall Doxey, now sergeant at arms of the Senate. He, his wife and son have been there nearly 16 years. They have been vacationing several weeks in Mississippi where they were notified yesterday that they must vacate.

Condemnation proceedings against the hotel were filed in District Court yesterday. The sale price of about $400,000 has already been agreed upon, though, and no difficulty in having the court approve the deal is anticipated.

Burns Fatal to Woman

Mamie Holmens, 60, of 210 F st. sw., died at Casualty Hospital last night as the result of burns she had received on Wednesday when her apartment caught fire. She was discovered, after the fire, by District firemen, in her bathtub, trying to soothe the burns of her face and arms with cooling water.

ThomasNamed Bond Head for Credit Unions

A. W. Thomas, president of the District of Columbia Credit Union League has been named chairman of the credit union division in the Third War Loan Campaign, it was announced yesterday by John A. Reilly, chairman of the District war finance committee.

Thomas, a North Carolinian by birth, has lived in the District since 1929. He attended schools in North Carolina and furthered his education at Old Point Comfort College, Virginia.

He is a member of the board of directors of the National Association of Credit Unions and is chairman of the association's tax committee. He is also a member of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation's contact committee.

"I am delighted to have this opportunity to serve in the Third War Loan," said Thomas yesterday. "Credit unions have done and are continuing to do an excellent job in promoting war thrift. A total in excess of 50 million dollars in war bonds was raised during the Second War Loan last April, to which amount the District contributed slightly in excess of one million dollars. We intend to increase the tempo of our continuous war savings program during the Third War Loan campaign, and confidently expect to accomplish sales of two million dollars worth of war securities in this drive."

District quota in the 15-billion-dollar national drive is 94 million dollars.

75-Cent U. S. Flag Contest in Suit By Veteran Group

A suit over ownership of an American flag was heard yesterday by Judge Ellen K. Raedy in Municipal Court. Contesting parties are the regular Veterans Association suing members of the military order of the Liberty Bell, both veterans groups.

The KVA claims some of its former members left the organization to form the Order of the Liberty Bell and took the American flag as well as the organizational flag. The latter has been returned.

Walter Johnson, commander of the Order of the Liberty Bell, said an agreement was reached after the soldiers of his organization left the KVA, whereby the organization flag was returned and the American flag retained at the Soldiers Home.

The 3-by-5 foot flag is now in the possession of the United States marshal pending outcome of the suit. Legally the flag is valued at approximately 75 cents.

B. J. Long Quits One U. S. Post To Take Another

Bernard J. Long, 33, submitted his resignation yesterday as an Assistant U. S. Attorney and announced that he will accept a position as trial counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Long, who resides at 3925 Fulton st. nw., said his resignation will become effective Tuesday, August 31. He has been in charge of civil litigation, enemy alien control work for the U. S. Attorney's office here, and has handled many important bank cases.

Long is a native of Leavenworth, Kans. He came here 23 years ago, attended Eastern High School, then Georgetown University School of Foreign Service and was graduated in 1935 from Georgetown Law School. He became an Assistant U. S. attorney in 1939.

Central-Unit Ambulance Setup Ready

System Created To Eliminate Delay Starts Functioning Next Wednesday

A centrally controlled ambulance system, created to eliminate delays in rushing emergency cases to hospitals, was given final approval by the Commissioners yesterday and will begin functioning Wednesday, it was announced by Capt. Herbert A. Friede, superintendent of fire alarms, who will be in charge of the system.

Twenty-five available ambulances, including 13 police scout-car ambulances, two from Emergency and Casualty Hospitals, one from Freedman's, two Fire Department rescue cars and three ambulances and two Health Department cars will comprise the available equipment.

A problem confronting the new system, Friede said, is securing priorities to purchase 10 two-way radio sets to install in vehicles not already equipped with them.

The system, which will be known as the Emergency Ambulance Service, will operate from Fire Alarm Headquarters at McMillan Park. Three operators will work the switchboard on eight-hour shifts, taking calls and recording the movement of all units.

It was pointed out that the service will in no way interfere with the regular service of the hospitals participating, but that each of these institutions will be required to inform control headquarters when a call is made which is independent of orders issued by control center. Each driver of an ambulance will be required to report to the control center when he reports for work and when he quits.

It will be also be the obligation of all hospitals and departments participating in the service to insure 24-hour service for emergency telephones which will be installed at places where ambulances are stationed.

Friede said that normally there were between 3000 and 4000 emergency calls each year in the District. He said that heretofore there had been no method of expediting ambulances to these calls and in many cases two or three units would be dispatched to the same scene with the result they would not be available to answer other calls.

The plan also includes dispatching doctors on emergency calls which do not necessitate ambulance service. In such events the calls will be routed through the Medical Bureau, 1718 M st. nw. (Telephone 6100), and dispatchers will record the details of the call.

City News In Brief

Members of the District draft boards will meet Monday night at the Washington Gas Light Building to discuss means of deferring the drafting of fathers until the ranks of single men and childless married men have been exhausted.

Opposition to taking fathers appeared to be rising last night among local draft board chairmen, who agreed to accept the latest draft edict from the War Manpower headquarters of Paul V. McNutt only as a last resort. Dissatisfaction was expressed freely by the local board membership over the handling of the industrial manpower problems as it affects the needs of the armed forces.

Several expressed the opinion that "there are too many able-bodied single men on the streets of Washington to warrant the drafting of fathers." One spokesman asserted that too many Government officials are receiving occupational deferments on the grounds of essentiality when such claims are clearly questionable.

Dope Peddler Sentenced

Charged with illegal transportation and sale of heroin, James D. Allen, 33, Negro, 400 block M st. sw., was sentenced to 20 months to 5 years in prison, by Justice Matthew F. McGuire in District Court yesterday.

James Pope, 24, Negro, was sentenced to serve 20 months to 5 years on charges of violating the Selective Service Act by failing to notify his draft board of a change of address.

MAKE IT DO . . .

Making the Most Of a Mirror

By Martha Ellyn

Is your home a reflection of your tastes? Or is it a place where you hang your hat and shuffle along? It is to be hoped that it is a cheerful expression of your mode of life. Everyone is endowed with imagination but many are too indifferent or lazy to use it in household decor.

No doubt the homes we now have are the ones we will have for the duration. That means we must keep them in order by repairing, refinishing and renewing. To be sure there are shortages and restrictions upon the home use of many critical materials. But there are enough items left so that attractive, comfortable homes are possible.

If you want to give your house a cheerful lift, consider the possibilities of mirrors. Mirrors have the faculty of making reflections glamorous. They not only make for beauty but do wonders as space makers. If a room is small with skimpy windows, try the effect of a mirror on the wall where it will pick up the window reflection, and see the change it brings.

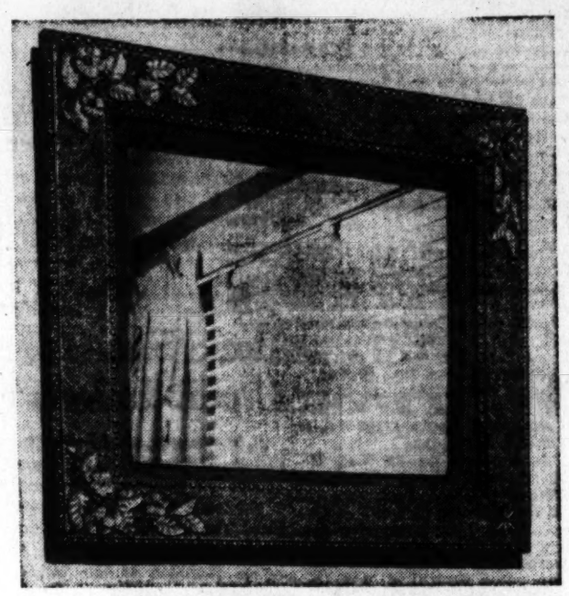
A mirror across a fireplace will pick up and reflect flames. When you place a mirror on top of a mantel, commode or chest, so that flowers and decorating accessories are reflected, you double the effect of the objects.

Mirrors placed in back of table lamps also give a pleasing effect. Mirror-topped coffee tables and dressing tables, not only supply beauty, but a surface which can be cared for easily.

And don't forget that a mirror in a child's room should not be placed high over a chest or dresser so that they cannot see themselves. Hang mirrors which children are to use, at the side of the chest, not over it. This may be one way to develop pride in grooming, by allowing children to see the results of clean hands and face, well-combed hair and well-adjusted clothing.

If you have need of a coffee table and your budget can't stand the strain, let this drawing suggest how an attractive one can be assembled from wooden legs and a picture frame with mirror insert.

It is a double-beveled mirror without frame which highlights the mahogany credenza shown here. This mirror is hung, as all mirrors should be, at the eye level, not only so short persons can see if a hat is cocked properly or stray hairs need anchoring but to make low ceilings seem higher.



This lovely 100-year-old wooden picture frame, with its delicate gold ornamentation, emerged from a cellar after many years of hiding. Now it adequately borders a plate-glass mirror edged with rose velvet.

Inventiveness Pays

You don't necessarily have to dash out and buy mirrors ready to hang. There may be the nucleus of a mirror stored away in the attic, storeroom or closet. Lovely old picture frames can be fitted with mirrors with grand results. Perhaps, you have an old picture with an attractive frame, but the picture just "won't do." You know metal frames are not plentiful these war days. Wooden frames, exquisitely carved, were also treasures of by-gone days. These often lend themselves as carriers of mirrors.

Just put your imagination into play and you can create many lovely mirrored items for the home. Perhaps you have an old table which can be lowered, and then a framed mirror placed on it to make it a cocktail table.

Old mirrors which are of good quality, but whose borders are none too attractive can be high-styled with a border of flowered cretonne or wallpaper. These are especially appropriate to hang over dressing tables which are created from orange crates, old sewing machines and tables.

The supply of mirrors in local stores, which will do mirror work, styled to your needs, I have found is quite adequate for present needs. There are several things you must know before you go to the stores to ask them to cut a mirror. You must know the exact size. If it is to be a special shape an exact pattern should be made. You will want to know if the frame you intend to use will support a certain weight of mirror. Plate glass mirrors are heavy. You may need a mirror of one-eighth inch thickness for a light frame, while a mirror of one-fourth inch thickness would be advisable for furniture tops.

Quality Varies

The quality in mirrors varies widely. The price depends upon the quality of glass, the type of silvering used, the kind of edge finish. Plate glass mirrors usually range from three-sixteenths of an inch to five-sixteenths of an inch. You can buy mirrors, with life-time guarantee. Not all mirrors are plate glass, some are "shock" glass. This kind sometimes has such flaws as streaks, waves, haziness, bubbles and the ability to distort objects reflected.

You can indulge yourself in a colored mirror if it suits your decorative scheme. Shops which cut mirrors have them available in such colors as peach, blue and gold. These colored mirrors are especially lovely as tops for dressing tables, cocktail tables, and consoles.

After you have decided upon the kind of mirror and its place in your decorative scheme, then make sure it is hung to advantage not only to create spaciousness and a pleasing effect, but also at a height where it gives service. A mirror hung so high that you can see but your topmost lock when you stand on tiptoes will not give the decorating effect desired, or allow a person to see themselves.

Mirrors need care as does all household equipment. They should never be hung against a damp wall. Direct sunlight is also harmful to mirrors. The cleaning of mirrors is not difficult and the reward is well worth the effort.

Mirrors should be dusted regularly the same as all other surfaces, not just on occasion. Frequently they will need washing. A clean, soft lintless cloth, dampened in clear water will clean a mirror. It should then be wiped thoroughly with a dry, clean, soft, lintless cloth.

If you have an old mirror which especially fits your decorative needs but it has come unsilvered, don't despair. Mirrors can be resilvered. For information concerning where custom cut mirrors may be purchased, and where mirrors may be resilvered, call NAtional 4200, Extension 324, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Necessity mothered the dressing table ensemble below. A bouffant skirt on an orange-crate dressing table and a mirror edged with wall paper can pinch hit for those left-behind boudoir furnishings of wartime workers.

LONG LIVE SHOE COUPON No. 18

By Ruth Gregory

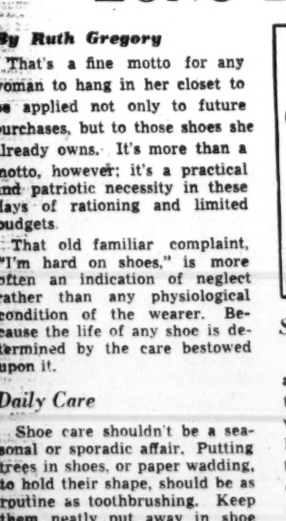
That's a fine motto for any woman to hang in her closet to be applied not only to future purchases, but to those shoes she already owns. It's more than a motto, however; it's a practical and patriotic necessity in these days of rationing and limited budgets.

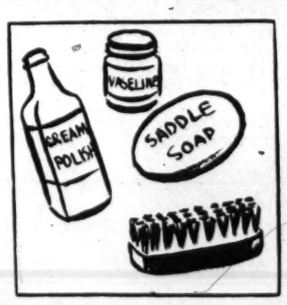
That old familiar complaint, "I'm hard on shoes," is more often an indication of neglect rather than any physiological condition of the wearer. Because the life of any shoe is determined by the care bestowed upon it.

Daily Care

Shoe care shouldn't be a seasonal or sporadic affair. Putting trees in shoes, or paper wadding, to hold their shape, should be as routine as toothbrushing. Keep them neatly put away in shoe bags or on a rack—never helter-skelter on the floor.

Use a shoe horn to put shoes on. The backs of the best of fabrics have a way of breaking down under strain. A daily change of shoes, if possible, is a sure way to extend their life. If shoes are allowed to air out for a day between wearings, accumulated perspiration (which tends to rot linings and leathers) will not have as much chance to wear out your footgear.





Shoe Repair

"A stitch in time saves nine" applies as well to shoes as anything else. At the first sign of wear, have shoes resoled and reheeled. Runover heels throw the shoe body out of shape and eventually break down the construction. If top and sole are allowed to split, the shoe will be thrown out of line.

If you scuff your toes, renew them by putting a little vasaline on them. If it's a bad peel, use a little flexible cement beneath the broken piece.

We know a place where you can have shoes "desueded" and reduced to smooth leather finish for about $1. It's a fine idea when the body of the shoe is in good condition, except for mangy-looking suede.

Home Cobbling

If you find, as we have, that shoe repair shops are as overworked as laundries, you might try your hand at some simple home cobbling. Get yourself a tube of flexible cement and apply it yourself for such simple and continual problems as heels and shoe lifts, loose innersoles and linings. You just spread the cement on both surfaces, wait a few moments until it gets tacky, and then press together tightly. You can get a tube of this cement for around 25 cents, (good for many another home repair job, too).

If you're tired of the color of a pair of shoes, you can always have them dyed, or dye them yourself. We know of a good black shoe dye you can put on at home that costs about 25 cents.

Wet Weather

Rain and sleet play havoc with shoes. So mind you "wear your rubbers" or galoshes. If you are caught short and your shoes get soaked, put them in form-fitting shoe trees, or stuff them with paper, and let them dry as they are. Never put them near direct heat when wet (or any other time). You'll ruin them if you do. If it's a smooth leather, you can soften them with a little saddle soap after they're dry.

You can waterproof your leather street shoes and lengthen their life by a simple process: Melt together a mixture of two parts of beeswax and one part of mutton fat. Apply it at night, and next day wipe it well with a piece of flannel.

Special Care of Different Materials

Smooth leathers (calf, kid, etc.) take cream polish, liquid polish, or wax polish that contains no turpentine. Turpentine dries out leather. Neutral-colored cream may be used on all shades of leather, but will not cover water stains as will colored cream. Patent leathers are best cleaned with a dampened cloth and neutral soap. Vaseline also helps prevent cracking. Suedes, buckskins and nappy leathers should be cleaned with a fairly stiff brush, after treating with a liquid dressing. Beware of wire-bristled brushes; they break down the nap. A little bath sponge is just as good as a brush for cleaning suede. Cotton fabrics, if they're good quality and color fast, may be cleaned successfully with a brush and mild soap and water. White shoes vary in fabric and hence there is no all-purpose white cleaner. Use cleaners recommended for the particular type of material in your shoe. For some, mild soap and water are all that are necessary. Gabardine should be cleaned with a brush and carbon tetrachloride cleaner.

For further information regarding any of the items mentioned herein, please call NAtional 4200, extension 324. If you want detailed material on clothing care, write to the Bureau of Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

SHOP and RUN—

By Marianne

Glove Story

If your gloves need to be repaired—

There are several shops that will mend your gloves and put them into active service again. If you're not too skillful with the needle, it's best to have this done by professionals who do the job so neatly that you can't find where the original damage was.

If they need cleaning—

Don't let them collect too much dirt (grime doesn't pay, you know). If they're not washable you can have them dry cleaned for a small sum.

If they have lost their color—

Have them tinted (not dyed) to their original color. We know a shop that will do this for you.

For washable gloves—

You can get a glove shampoo that does a fine job—at a cost of only 1 cent per washing! It's fine for suede, cape, kid or pigskin and will not harm the most delicate colors or fabrics. 50 cents.

Do you lose your gloves?—

Then you should have a handy glove guard that attaches to your purse and insures that you'll not drop them or leave them some place.

Take a hint—

Sew name-and-address tag to the inside seam of each glove—in case you should lose them.

Next time you buy a pair of gloves, watch the way the sales clerk puts them on you, and imitate.

When you take your gloves off, loosen each finger, turn the cuff back over the fingers and draw the glove off. However, don't pull suede gloves off this way, or the finger tips may become shiny.

Never wash a pair of leather gloves after they have been dry cleaned.

Use cotton thread to mend leather gloves.

For washable gloves, use glove shampoo. Roll gloves in a towel until excess water is taken up. Shape the gloves and blow into the fingers. Lay them on a towel to dry. Just before they are dry, put them on to shape them, take them off and let them finish drying that way.

For further information call NAtional 4200, Extension 324, between 9 and 5:30.

These Women!

By d'Alessio

"Does she LOVE me? Look—NO HANDS!"

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

War Story (1943)

"What did you do in the big war, Grandma?"

"I worked very hard, my dear. I belonged to the WAWS, the Women's Auxiliary for Wartime Smartness."

"What did the WAWS do, Grandma?"

"They kept up national morale by being smart. Their grooming was always impeccable, their attire in perfect taste and possessing an indefinable air of chic, their personalities alert, vibrant——"

"But did you march and drill, Grandma?"

"We-ll-er, no. You see I had to spend so much time in the stores and beauty shops."

"Why?"

"So I would always look smart and maintain our national standards of grooming. You see, our fighting men at the front would have lost heart if they had thought the women at home were going around without their coiffures trim and crisply flattering, without their make-up being applied artistically and meticulously, or without their lapel gadgets reflecting live, interesting, up-to-the-minute personalities."

"Did you ever help build ships or airplanes, Grandma?"

"No-er, you see it took a great deal of time to keep my face and figure in tip-top condition, to look physically young, alert, attractive to the eye, with a voice pleasing to the ear. There were my exercises, my sun baths, my herb baths, my massages, my facials to relieve wartime strain, my rhythmic breathing and the other regimes I needed to keep myself fit."

"Fit for what, Grandma?"

"We-ll-er for—for keeping up morale. You see, if we women hadn't kept ourselves lovely, we would have let down the defense workers at home, the Red Cross people, the air-raid wardens, the spotters——"

"Did you ever spot planes, Grandma?"

"We-ll-er not exactly. I signed up once, but my fall shopping came on and I had to quit. You see, shopping took a great deal of time if you kept smart. You had to find clothes that were simple with classic wearability, and yet that possessed that indefinable air of chic. And with the crowds and the sales service——"

"Did you ever work in a store, Grandma?"

"Oh, no! The hours would have conflicted with my swimming lessons, my gym lessons, my esthetic dancing lessons, my speech lessons, my conversation lessons, my Eskimo lessons."

"Why did you study Eskimo, Grandma?"

"Well, every truly smart woman was studying some unusual language to broaden her world vision, make her more intellectually alive and magnetic, and give her that distinction that comes from unusual achievement, and I thought it would be especially smart to take up Eskimo."

"What else did you do to win the war, Grandma?"

"Let's see . . . Oh yes, I had to read all the smart magazines and book and play reviews so I could be smart conversationally, clever, provocative, up-to-the-minute, so that I would be able to cheer our returning heroes with my wit and stimulating ideas. Then, of course, I had to keep up my outdoor sports so I could retain my mental and physical resiliency in the postwar world. I also had to take up a hobby—I chose the collecting of musical powder boxes—so I would be a well-rounded human being, and I had to go to a great many parties so I could keep up on things."

"What things, Grandma?"

"Oh, who was getting married or divorced and who was having babies—a great many people were having babies, and you had to keep your wits about you not to get mixed up on them—and who was doing what in Congress and at the White House. And then, of course, if you went around much you had to know how to make a smart entrance, and how to spot the most interesting person in a room, and how to create the impression of being a smart personality."

"You must have had to work awfully hard, Grandma."

"I did, my dear. But, of course, we won a famous victory."

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Yesterday relief bottles were discussed. Complementary formulas differ from relief bottles chiefly in that they are given as a supplement to a breast feeding. Relief bottles substitute for a nursing.

Complementary bottles are valuable when the mother discovers, as so many do, that she cannot provide all the nourishment for her baby. This may be true the first few weeks of nursing, it may not show up until the later months. She can determine this accurately only by keeping a weekly account of the weight changes. She may well be able to interpret a baby's cries by noting the sagging line of his weight.

The advantages of continuing to nurse the baby are evident enough. The baby must be kept well nourished, but if there is any breast milk at all, it would be a shame to deny it to him. By means of this additional cows' milk by bottle, the mother may be able to nurse the baby the full nine months.

The late afternoon feedings are most often the ones at which baby voices his discontent. When complementary bottles are introduced they may well be at the 2 p. m. and 6 p. m. feedings. The bottles are offered immediately after the nursings and not midway between them.

Preparation of the complementary formula follows the same lines as the preparation of a whole day's bottle feedings. The milk is boiled (unless a processed milk is used), the water is boiled, the bottles and nipples are boiled. Sugar is added to the boiled water and that in turn is added to the milk. The whole is bottled and cobled and kept cold until served.

If the baby gets only one complementary bottle, then the formula will be one-fourth of the 24-hour one. Two bottles will be one-half, three bottles, three-fourths. If this is baby's first taste of milk, the formula may be slightly weakened until his reaction to it is noted.

While definite amounts are prepared, the baby's own appetite will dictate how much he will accept. If his nursing is a scanty one, he may drain the full amount, at other times he may leave some. He knows how much he needs to give him satisfaction.

These supplementary feedings may well be used to tide the mother over that early nursing period when her breast supply is being stabilized. Bottle feedings, to satisfy the baby's hunger, may later be abandoned if the breasts function so as to provide complete nourishment.

Our leaflet, "Sweet Milk Formulas," suggests those which may be used for complementary feedings. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

If you have any doubt that exercise will trim down your hips, listen to this "I have lost 4 inches off my hips in six weeks without losing an ounce of weight! I look 10 pounds slimmer and feel wonderful!"

If you are over 18, don't try to equal her record of two-thirds of an inch off per week. Take it a little more easily and give yourself more time. You will slim down. The trick is to put yourself on a schedule and follow it, day after day.

What she says about looking pounds slimmer would apply to any other measurement improved to such an extent. In some instances it is a trimmer waist that is needed for streamlines. But usually it is the hipline. Women do not climb hills, walk enough stairs or kick like chorus girls. The hip measurement spreads so gradually that the change is almost unnoticeable—until it is alarming!

Exercise steadily comes easier for the simple, physiological reason that it actually does make you "feel wonderful." If your weight is normal and your hips too large, today's set will trim you down. And even if you go on a diet, don't skip the exercise—take it to make sure the weight comes off the right spot.

Here is the technique that let our teen-age reducer do such a quick job of streamlining: Rolling and kicking.

1. Position: Lie on the floor on your back, with legs straight down, hands up at sides.

Movement: Start rolling—over on one hip and thigh, back across, and over on the other hip and thigh. Keep it up for 10 good rolls, then relax.

2. Position: Sit up and lean back on hands and forearms, with knees flexed and feet close to floor, knees together.

Movement: Roll across the hips and on the fleshy padding at the side, then back across and over on the other side. Try to keep rolling for 20 times, and relax for a minute.

3. Position: Standing with one hand on chair back at side for support, feet parallel.

Movement: Shift your weight to one foot, keep your trunk erect and flex the outer leg, bringing knee up as high in front as you can get it. Hold. Very slowly and without lowering knee, swing hip sideward. Again, hold. Lower to starting position. Relax and repeat three times with the same leg, then rest for about a minute before performing with the other leg. Accuracy is the main thing in this exercise.

4. Position: Hand on chair back as before.

Movement: This time just swing the outer leg—freely and loosely. But keep all the action in the hip muscles and don't let the knee bend as you swing forward. You should do this for 25 counts without tiring. Then repeat with other leg.

Finish by shaking each leg loosely and limply from the hip joint to get the tension out of those muscles.

Miss Zuloaga To Be Bride of Army Officer

Of interest to Washington is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Olga Elisa-Maria Zuloaga, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pedro Zuloaga of New York, Caracas, Venezuela, and Washington, to Lieut. Francis Stephen Johnson, USA, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Wood Johnson of New York. The prospective bridegroom is now stationed in Washington.

Miss Zuloaga attended schools in Paris, was graduated from the Baldwin School, Bryn Mawr, Pa., and attended Bennington College. She made her debut at the Victory Ball last December at the Ritz-Carlton in New York.

Her father, formerly in the diplomatic service in Paris, is now Commissioner of Immigration for the Venezuelan government. The bride-to-be is the granddaughter of the late Dr. Nicomedes Zuloaga, of the Supreme Court of Venezuela, who was at one time a delegate to the International Court of Justice and The Hague.

Lieutenant Johnson studied in Paris and was graduated from Harvard in 1940. He also attended the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

CONNECTICUT AT CALVERT

Lucius Beebe's New York

The current date, approximately, marks the fifteenth year the reporter has been invading the beer stoops, bagnios and ballrooms of the land, and a few installments of his department are being devoted to some of his happier and more scrammy recollections of this decade and a half.

A Reporters Remembers:

The great back room of the Plaza mystery involving a bronze plaque supposedly commemorating an adjacent table where George M. Cohan and Sam H. Harris were once accustomed to foregather. It appeared there a few months ago allegedly sponsored "by a group of their pals" of whom George Jessel's name was the only one to appear imperishably engrossed in the memorial. There was considerable comment, not all of it favorable, among the Plaza's old accustomed patrons. Last week the plaque mysteriously disappeared during the night and none of the Plaza staff were able to explain its going. "Must have been burglars," was the considered opinion of Henry Rost, the managing director. It was notable that the burglars had carefully removed all traces of screw holes and revarnished the wood panel where the memorial had been.

The waiters' strike which established John and Jerrold Krimsky and myself as the proprietors of a modest Broadway success. When we opened at the American Music Hall, of which we were the joint proprietors, with "Murder In the Old Red Barn" in 1936, the night of our grand, gala, super for-free premiere at this dramatic boozing kennel, our entire staff of waiters walked out in a union huff. The regular servitors and barkeeps had been instructed to keep the free strong waters within reason, at least until the reviewers had had a chance to see the show, but when the Brothers Krimsky, Richard Maney, our press agent, Angela Wrimsky and I were forced to start rushing drinks for our guests, all restraint vanished in the ensuing confusion. So happily bemused were the reporters by the time they came to write their notices that the defects of the dramatic nonesuch fled their minds and we got universal rave reviews.

The most lavish costume fling within my memory was Elsa Maxwell's Red and White Ball given in the depth of depression times at the Waldorf. Added to the usual sluicing with illimitable food and drink was the entire cast of "Jubilee," with Miss Maxwell playing herself in that celebrated musical, and four complete changes of rather elaborate and handsome costumes for every guest, with retiring rooms, valets and maids to assist in their changing. By seven in the morning nobody knew who any one else was, or even themselves, and the resulting indiscretions, contretemps and misunderstandings are to his day part of the Mayfair legend.

At one of Evalyn Walsh McLean's dinners at her old Friendship in Wisconsin ave. in Washington, Joseph Hergesheimer telling me he was working on his autobiography. There was to be no need of an index, since there wasn't going to be a single name of any other person mentioned. Only Joseph Hergesheimer.

The luncheon given to me in the State suite of the Palace Hotel in San Francisco on the celebrated Palace solid gold plate the first year of the Golden Gate Fair. There were 20 guests, mostly Crockers and Camerons; 20 house footmen, 20 men from the Val O'Farrell detective agency to watch the waiters, 2 barkeeps, a wine steward, 2 hotel executives and 4 waiter captains. The gold service got back to the vaults of the Bank of America practically intact.

The Webster Hall brawls engineered by Cynthia White, the last of the Greenwich Village Bohemians, now departed, but once the roughest parties in town, from which anyone was lucky to emerge with all of his teeth and a complete scalp.

On the roof of the Chase Hotel in St. Louis, Dwight Fiske singing his song, "Pogey Brown," not precisely flattering to commissioned officers, for the delight of one lone gob and his girl entirely surrounded by tables jamming the room with commanders, lieutenants and ensigns and their wives.

The time I had written a full-dress feature for Life magazine about the late Prof. William Lyon Phelps of Yale, some of the less reverent passages of which had outraged Mrs. Phelps to the point where she wrote me a livid letter specifically barring me from ever again entering the portals of their Whitney ave. home in New Haven. The next week, en route to the Elm City on the New Haven Railroad, I encountered Dr. Phelps in the club car. The old gentleman was delighted with the magazine copy and remarked that he had had more mail from old students about it than through any other source in his career and insisted I come home for dinner. "Annabel will be delighted to see you," he said jovially. I explained that I had reason to doubt this, so Uncle Billy, who was just the least bit intimidated by Annabel himself, took me to dinner at his club instead.

The late Dan Moriarity, who ran a college boys' speakeasy of internationally famous proportions in East 58th st., was, as was required by his calling, an Irishman of ready wit and resources of imagination. Confronted one night by a youthful patron who was feeling waggish and in no pain and was insistent upon introducing a cab horse to the premises, Dan looked through the door slot and said cheerfully: "Good evening, Mr. Farrell; come right in, but I'm afraid your companion hasn't been here before and I don't know him. Can't afford to take any chances, you know, and I can't admit him."

The time when, for some first night or other, I squired Libby Holman on the town only to discover that in the course of the evening she had worn three differently and progressively more costly fur wraps. The first, a simple mink, she discarded at the Colony in favor of something in ermine, which she wore to the theater and as far as Monte Carlo, where she picked up a flock of wonderful sables, some of them, I thought, alive. Her maid kept going ahead and planting them in case she got tired of what she was at the moment wearing.

Banker Rufus Dawes, at the opening of the Streets of Paris at the Chicago World's Fair, in tails and an opera hat from which descended trailers of woven orchids, the relic of some elaborate lady's corsage.

Oppenheim Rites to Be Tomorrow

Funeral services for Burton E. Oppenheim, 47, deputy executive director of the War Labor Board, who died Thursday at his home, 1527 33rd st. nw., will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. at the Hines Funeral Home, 2901 14th st. nw.

OPPENHEIM

A native of Baltimore, Md., Mr. Oppenheim was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. For many years he ran a shirt manufacturing business in Baltimore.

He came in 1934 to serve as deputy administrator for the Garment Code of the NRA. Later he worked as chief of staff of the Prison Industries Reorganization Administration.

Mr. Oppenheim also served with the Labor Department, the War Production Board and the Office of Price Administration.

He began work with the WLB last January. In addition to serving as deputy executive director, he was also cochairman of the WLB's Ship Building Commission and the War Shipping Panel.

The National War Labor Board in a resolution yesterday said:

"During his eight months of service with the WLB as a deputy executive director, Burton Oppenheim earned the respect and effection of every member of the board and the staff. As the board's expert on industry commissions and panels, he rendered invaluable assistance in the creation, guidance and supervision of these important agencies, and as vice chairman of the War Shipping Panel and cochairman of the Shipbuilding Commission, he displayed the wise and effective leadership which marked all of his work.

"His firmness and integrity of character and his common sense and patience particularly adapted him to the difficult task of adjusting controversies between conflicting interests, while his modesty, humor and warmth of heart endeared him to everyone with whom he came in contact.

"He was a selfless and devoted public servant whom the Government will sorely miss. The host of friends whom he has left behind in the WLB deeply mourn his sudden and untimely death."

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ellen Oppenheim, a son, Burton Benedict, now with the Army Air Forces, a brother, Austin Oppenheim of New York City, and a sister, Mrs. Mark Goldsmith of Chicago.

Hospital Ward To Be Memorial to Dr. Nordhoff-Jung

A memorial to the work for which she had devoted her life, a convalescent ward is to be maintained in Georgetown University Hospital with $290,000 bequeathed by the late Dr. Sofi A. Nordhoff-Jung, who became noted as associated professor in the Georgetown Medical School.

Dr. Nodhoff-Jung died June 6, at the age of 79. In her will, which entered probate division of District Court yesterday, she declared that with the exception of small sums, the whole estate will go to the hospital.

A bequest of $35,000 was left outright to the president and directors of Georgetown University. This sum will be added to $15,000 previously given for the ward. It is to be named as a memorial to Dr. Nordhoff-Jung and her husband, the late Dr. Franz A. R. Jung, famous stomach specialist.

The will was filed by Attorney Charles F. Wilson.

Axis Steel Output Cut 25% in Year, Trade Circles Say

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—The torrential downpour of United Nations bombs has cut Axis steelmaking production about 25 per cent in little more than a year, industry sources disclosed today.

Present Axis output of approximately 52 million tons a year doesn't even half match 133 million tons reckoned as the aggregate yearly rate for the Allied powers, and compares with enemy annual production of about 68 million tons slightly more than 12 months ago.

Weakest link in the Axis chain of steelmaking centers dotting the European Continent was listed as bomb-ravished Italy, now thought reduced to between 10 and 25 per cent of the three-million-tons-a-year production a year ago, following air assaults on such cities as Turin, Milan, Genoa and Naples.

Output of 25 million tons attributed to Germany about 12 months ago reportedly has been whittled to 60 per cent of that amount because of the bomb havoc in Duesseldorf, Essen, Bochum, Duisburg, Berlin and other steel-producing cities.

Shaw Declines to Pry Into India's Affairs

London, Aug. 27 (AP).—George Bernard Shaw said today that India likely would become a "federated commonwealth like the United States, the British Commonwealth and the USSR," but he declined an invitation to join the Council for the International Recognition of Indian Independence.

"My intrusion into India's affairs would be an impertinence," he said in a letter made public by the council.

80 Playground Winners Get Certificates

Winners of playground victory builder awards in Southeast and Southwest Washington received certificates in ceremonies at Jefferson Playground, between 7th and 9th and H and I sts. sw., yesterday. Achievement certificates were presented to 80 out of the 1000 boys and girls who commenced the program two months ago.

The winners aged 9 to 15 had passed a series of tests in physical fitness and craft aptitudes based upon victory builder courses offered by the D. C. Recreation Department. The courses included tests in swimming, crafts, first aid and drill. Three courses, the red, white and blue star courses, were offered and differed in degree of physical strength and aptitude required. Separate tests were given for boys and girls. Only three in the area received all three awards. They were Helen Kern, 14, of 1127 6th st. sw., Beverly Jones, 14, of 629 I st. sw., and Patsy McLaughlin, 15, of 626 L st. sw., all of the Jefferson playground.

Presentations were made by Lieut. Comdr. William D. (Rusty) Thompson, former McKinley High School athletic director, and now attached to the Navy Yard as director of welfare, recreation, and physical training for the Potomac Naval Command. Also participating and representing the D. C. Recreation Department were Miss Sibyl Baker, assistant supervisor; Clinton Price, program organizer, and Mrs. Clarice Smith, director of the neighborhood division and chairman of the committee which set up the program.

Similar ceremonies were held at other playground area centers and day camps throughout the city.

Flames Sweep Laundry in Alexandria

The Colonial Laundry, 701 North St. Asaph st., Alexandria, was ravaged by flames and a volunteer fireman injured in a three-alarm fire that burned last night for an hour before firemen were able to get it under control.

Injured was James Floyd Carver, 34, of 609 North Columbus st., a volunteer fireman with Company No. 4. He sustained a fractured arm and possibly other injuries when he fell off a fire truck. He was taken to Alexandria Hospital, where X-ray photographs were taken to determine the extent of his injuries.

The laundry was gutted and the loss has been estimated by T. A. Warner of 13 Duvall drive, Westmoreland Hills, Md., as being between $20,000 and $40,000. The fire is believed to have originated around the elevator shaft. All the laundry in the plant with the exception of that in the office was destroyed.

Disney's 'Victory Through Air Power' at Columbia

By Marjorie Kelly

Walt Disney's "Victory Through Air Power," a Technicolor cartoon interpretation of Major Alexander de Seversky's book, is being shown this week at Loew's Columbia.

When a teller of fairy tales, one of the most enchanting spinners of yarns in ours or any time, brings to a military issue his fanciful imagination and his tremendous ability to clarify and picturize abstractions, the result is a film that you can bet on to blow the lid off the air-power question.

Briefly, Maj. de Seversky's thesis is this: That the airplane has brought into being a war strategy entirely new. Previously, there were only two ways to defeat the enemy—to kill off his armies, in order to get to the source of his power, or to sink his Navy so that you could blockade him and starve him into submission. Air power furnishes a third and more direct method—to go over the heads of the Army and Navy and strike direct at the enemy's source of power.

Nobody contests this, of course. But what is contested are the major's seemingly inevitable conclusions—that since air power has proven itself of such superior might the next necessary step is for us to create a separate air arm, not a subordinate part of Army or Navy, and to build long-range bombers which can strike directly from the bases we now have, rather than to waste lives capturing more bases so that we can strike at the enemy by means of short-range bombing flights.

Disney unfolds with irresistible logic the argument for long-range bombers, leaving the argument for a separate air arm to be inferred from his depiction of the power of the air forces and the victories which have been won by air power over land and sea power.

He begins with an interpolated newsreel of Gen. Billy Mitchell speaking years ago on the importance of preparation for aerial war. He goes on to tell of Mitchell's life and his persistent and ill-fated attempts to make the military powers-that-were realize what the last war had ended too soon to make generally apparent the decisive part air power would play in future military strategy.

Flashing back to the early attempts of the Wright brothers to make a flying machine that would fly, Disney traces the experiments at Kittyhawk through to the successful completion of the first plane built for the United States Army. The development of combat and bombing planes during the course of the first World War then is shown. The Disney sense of humor is apparent throughout this first part of the film, in his droll picturization of the bumpkins who assembled to watch the first flights at Kittyhawk, of the comically unsuccessful early attempts at cross-country flights and of the clumsy first pontoon planes.

Switching to "live" action briefly, the film introduces Maj. de Seversky, who begins very simply and in completely non-technical language, to explain the part air power has played in the war up to this time and the difficulties we face defeating the Axis with the air power we now have. The rest of the film is cartooned elaboration of his accompanying comments. The Axis is shown as a pair of octopi whose tentacles reach far out toward the United States, the arsenal of democracy, and the process of winning victory by means of land and sea power primarily is compared to killing the octopus by cutting off its tentacles, while air strategy is shown as the direct method of striking at the monster's body.

There's a tremendous thrill in the film's exposition of the history of this American invention, converted by the Germans from a force of great good to an instrument of destruction, but which we are now in a position to turn to our advantage, building huge new bombers which will be the deadliest things the world has ever seen.

The film has been criticized as not for children because of its vivid bombing scenes. I think that the abstraction of these scenes makes them far less terrifying than, for instance, the witch scenes in "Snow White" and the scene in "Pinocchio" where the bad little boys turned into donkeys. I don't think any child whose nerves will survive a display of Fourth of July fireworks will find this film frightening. There are hundreds of thousands of small boys in the country who know far more about the history of the airplane and the types in use today and their construction than do the majority of their elders. And these children are going to want to see the film. I don't think it will hurt them.

A measure of the film's simplicity and clarity, incidentally, is afforded by the fact that the large number of children in yesterday's audience sat quietly and absorbed not only in the funny scenes which show the history of the airplane but throughout Major de Seversky's exposition of his theories.

The film will not be of interest only to those who are already interested in the problems of air power. The controversy it is likely to arouse, its probable effect on the open question of what use we are going to make of our air potential, the beauty and forcefulness of the film as propaganda, whether or not you agree with it, make it practically a must.

Even if it weren't the absorbing film it is, its historical importance as the first use of the animated cartoon for the airing of a public issue make it a production which will be talked about for years. You'll be sorry if you miss it.

On Epochal Film

In one sequence of "Victory Through Air Power," Walt Disney's Technicolor interpretation of Maj. Alexander de Seversky's book, the Axis is compared to an octopus, and the present method of combating it is likened to slashing at the tentacles. De Seversky's theory is that the body itself, not the tentacles, should be attacked. That is, that we should devote our energy to the construction of long-range bombers, which can strike directly at the enemy, rather than on the acquisition of bases from which to make short-range bombing flights.

Wally Beery Wallops Japs at the Capitol

By Angele de T. Gingras

"Salute to the Marines," playing currently at the Capitol Theater, is a beautiful Technicolor advertisement for the Marines.

It is only Wallace Beery as Captain Bailey, a Marine sergeant, moving through the technicolor parade and Philippine battle scenes with his usual force and gusto, which keeps the picture nailed to the art form of a screen story. It persistently borders on being a combined news reel and animated Marine recruiting poster.

When you leave the theater you will be induced to consider one of two courses. You will hurry to join the pastel-tinted Army, Navy or Coast Guard as a reaction to too much advertising of the red-blooded Marines, or you will have succumbed to the flare of the picture and will join the Marines or the Marine Auxiliary.

Beery Has Leading Role

A typical noncommissioned tough Marine sergeant is Beery. His screen story-problem is that he's too good a trainer of boots. The colonel never lets him get into battle action.

Through a succession of incidents he finally decides he's had enough training of rookies and goes to the country outside of Manila to live with his wife and daughter.

Immediately trouble begins to brew with the Japs. Never permitted to go out to the scene of action, the scene of action comes to Captain Bailey.

There follow horrible scenes of bombed churches, burning villages and men crushed under tanks. The audience whoops when a Jap plane crashes. The small fry in the theater seats jump up and down and gurgle when the Marines machine-gun the Japs in the battlefield.

You think of the quiet of the air-cooled theater and the horror contrast on the screen. It is at this point you will begin to wonder about the Marine recruiting office nearest the Capitol Theater.

The stage show includes several interesting numbers. Adriana and Charly, acrobats who perform on a springy platform do some bouncing around that is the wish-fulfillment dream of the way you wanted to jump on beds when you were little but couldn't because it was bad for the bedsprings.

Smooth Stage Show

Toy and Wing, Chinese dancers, step from a Chinese vase to show us they can do a pretty good job of jitterbugging. At least one in the audience wished they had stepped from a Chinese vase to do some of their own dances.

Dolly Dawn, with a dash of Mae West in her proportions and hip movements, sings ballads in her throaty voice.

The Radio Ramblers, a singing trio of mem, do a nice job of combining singing and mimicing. They attempt to depopularize Sonny Boy by one of them doing a modified masculine Fannie Brice on one side of the mike.

'Appointment in Berlin' Tale Of Renegade Who Turned Spy

It is a renegade Englishman, superspy for the British secret service who has the "Appointment in Berlin" in the film which opened yesterday at the Metropolitan.

The time of the story is around the Munich conference and after, and the scenes are laid in London and on the European continent.

Keith Wilson, a British wing commander, played by George Sanders, is the Englishman who doesn't like the Chamberlain school of foreign policy. He is convinced that it is cowardice for the English to permit further blitzing across the Channel. He begins saying it on the streets and in the London cafes. Then he resorts to painting Nazi crosses on the doors of men responsible for appeasement.

Disgraces Air Force

He gets himself into the headlines of the newspapers. The British Air Force decides he has disgraced the service and they take away his wings.

Immediately the British secret service hires him. His first job is to show all sorts of attentions to Ilsa von Preissing, played by Margaret Chapman. Ilsa is the beautiful sister of a German director of radio communications.

There follow glamourous flashes of Sanders and Chapman running in and out of an interminable number of little tea houses and coffee shops and places where men and women play roulette. In that succession of flashes they come to know each other and to fall in love.

Then there is more feigned disgrace for Sanders in England so that the Nazis will be further fooled into letting him broadcast from Germany.

And what does he broadcast? You guessed it. There is a secret code. Every seventh word in his broadcast means something which the English want to know about the Nazis. And . . . yes, you guessed it again. The Nazis become suspicious and things begin popping.

Relative of Saturday Serial

This spy thriller has many resemblances to the Saturday afternoon serial. There are mysterious meetings between suave Englishmen on London bridges. There are airplane and motor rides with bombs cracking around. There are smart men putting things over on other smart men to the sound of gunshots.

But there is no next Saturday episode to look forward to in this thriller. The end is very finally the end.

There is nothing new in the film's plot or in the information dished out. The fact that England was unprepared when Germany was invading Czechoslovakia and Poland has been submerged in our knowledge of the terrific amount of planes and war materials which England and her Allies are now turning out.

However, if you like a spy thriller with all the usual trimmings this is one.

With the feature there is a short which was made twenty or so years ago. It is funny to watch. Charlie Chaplin is there and the Mack Sennett cops dashing around in skidding automobiles. There are men trying to balance themselves on ropes swinging between buildings, and on ropes hanging from airplanes. It reminds you that the movies were amazingly different in their baby days.—A. G.

LEONARD LYONS

Marine 'Sisters-in-Arms'

(Leonard Lyons is on vacation. His guest columnist today is Maj. Ruth Cheney Streeter, U. S. Marine Corps Women's Reserve.)

Thanks, Mr. Lyons, for this opportunity to say something about the women Marines. Funny thing, but people still ask why we don't have some abbreviated tag like the WACs, WAVES or SPARS. No reflection on the other services, but we prefer it the way it is. We get a kick out of being just Marines. There's the story about the colonel who was confronted with the question whether it would be all right for the women Marines in his office to smoke. "Hell," said he, "they're Marines, aren't they?" That's the way we like it.

In the short time the Women's Reserve of the Marine Corps has been established, the women have absorbed a lot of that something which makes all America proud of its Leathernecks. Spunk, color, tradition, esprit de corps—call it what you will, it's there in great quantities, and the women are picking up the tempo as avidly as any "boot" who emerges from the rigors of San Diego or Parris Island a full-fledged Marine.

Marine Corps slang has always been a colorful aspect of the service, and the Marines (female) rate an "E" for the way they have picked it up. The girl who used to say, "Won't you drop in for tea?" now says, "How about chow?" or "Let's get a cuppa jo." The old crowd who used to gather for a "pleasant chat" now "shoot the breeze" or "chip their lips." When you go to bed you "hit the sack."

Every service has its Private Hargrove, or the equivalent, and the Marines are no exception. During an examination one woman Marine was baffled to know what the abbreviation "FMF" stood for. Instead of the correct answer, "Fleet Marine Force," she took a pot shot and wrote in the slogan of the Women's Reserve, "Free a Marine to Fight!"

In training, the Women's Reserve puts great stress on the proper forms of military courtesy. On her first liberty one new Marine became excited when it was necessary to pass around an officer on the street and got her instructions mixed. In place of saluting and saying, "By your leave, sir," she saluted and said, "Leave me by, sir."

No doubt it has been difficult for men in the services to get used to the idea of "sisters in arms." At a Navy League dance in Philadelphia, one hearty sailor, just back from 16 months of sea duty, kept repeating incredulously, "Well, I never thought I'd ever dance with a Marine!" Then there was the Leatherneck who complained to a sergeant in the Marine Corps Women's Reserve, "Just imagine saying 'I love you' to a sergeant!"

Contrary to some opinion, the idea of women in the Marines is not new. The first woman Marine was a sturdy soul named Lucy Brewer, who disguised herself as a man and served with the Marines aboard the frigate Constitution during the War of 1812. Narrowest escape she ever had was when she fell from the top rigging into the sea, and some well-intentioned sailors wanted to help her out of her wet clothes. Then, of course, there were the Marinettes of the last war. One of the best of these was Lillian Russell, who, as a recruiting sergeant, really packed them in.

Well, the Medical Corps of the Navy is too big, and too insistent now to expect the advent of another Lucy Brewer, but the girls can still find plenty of hardy chores to perform. There's a girl at Camp Lejeune who is billed as a "lady blacksmith." Actually, she's an electrician. But, having come from Texas, the daughter of a Texas rancher, and having helped to sharpen plows and tools in her father's workshop, she goes to the blacksmith shop at Camp Lejeune almost daily just, as she explains, to "keep in practice with the hammer and forge."

One question that may be in the minds of some women who are delaying enlistment in the service is, "What do the men think of us?" Let this quote from an editorial in the New River Pioneer, the post paper at Camp Lejeune, where all Women Reserves are now trained, answer that question:

"The Marine Corps is proud of you. Wear your uniform proudly. You have the distinct privilege of being Marines. We look to you as you look to us. Together, as one unbeatable unit, we march to complete triumphant victory."

Could anyone ask for more?
